WEEKLY WEATHER SYNOPSIS.

Meteorological Office, Victoria, Nov. 28th to Dec. 4th, 1900.

The weather throughout this week has been unusually mild, with rainfall chiefly over the district from the Columbia river northward to the Straits of Juan de Fuca and the adjacent waters.

The week commenced with an important area of high barometer occupying the central portion of the Pacific states, and a series of low pressure areas crossing northern British Columbia and passing eastward through the Northwest provinces. Not pruch change occurred until the 30th Nov., when an extensive low barometer area be- afternoon, when a half-breed woman, province, causing fresh southwesterly winds and rainfall over the Lower Mainland, the Washington coast and upper Califernia.
