CHURCH ONLY HOPE AGAINST NEW WAR, SAYS LL. GEORGE

Would Call World Conference Presided Over by Pope Pius XI.—Says Statesmen at Geneva Have Failed

By WILLIAM HILLMAN
Central Press Canadian
Correspondent
London, April 20.—David Lloyd George, the time-honored minister of Great Britain, believes that Geneva statesmen have failed to disarm the world and that the last hope of disarmament lies with the world churches.

AVOID LLOYD GEORGE
Would Set Churches Against War

The dynamic non-mad Welshman suggests that a world conference of churches, with Pope Pius XI called upon to preside, might preserve the peace by averting the possibility of new war.

Lloyd George has tired of statesmen. As he explained to the writer, the statesmen of the former alliance have failed to keep their pledge to disarmament.

"President Wilson, Clemenceau, Orlando and I promised Germany that her disarmament was the beginning of a general disarmament."

"But since the Versailles treaty was signed, we have done nothing about putting our own hands in order."

"The world situation today is not of possibilities of infinite trouble. We nations deliberately court war, but I think it needs only an incident, such as that in 1911, when a revolver shot fired by a half-witted madman brought us into a world of horrors, and the devilish fury of which man is capable."

"I am convinced that if all the churches of Christendom were to be represented in one great central world church conference it might be possible to achieve a seemingly impossible vision of world peace."

"It would have to be summoned by the leaders of all the churches, and perhaps the pope, as head of the largest church, would have to preside over it. Let it be held in Rome if you like."

"The conference would honestly

FASCISM TO LEAD BRITAIN OUT OF ECONOMIC CHAOS SAYS SIR OSWALD MOSLEY

Chief of Fascists in England Would Divide Industry Into Self-Governing Areas Forming Corporations

"IS REVOLUTIONARY, BUT CONSTRUCTIVE"

Sir Oswald Mosley, one of the most prominent British Fascists, is head of the British Fascist Party. He began his career in Parliament as a Conservative, but like Gladstone and Disraeli, "crossed the floor" becoming a member of the House of Commons with the Fascist party, but was defeated for parliament.

to a passive acceptance of the situation which he proposed. In Great Britain, he is head of the British Fascist Party. He began his career in Parliament as a Conservative, but like Gladstone and Disraeli, "crossed the floor" becoming a member of the House of Commons with the Fascist party, but was defeated for parliament.

Sir Oswald Mosley
He may become Dictator

By SIR OSWALD MOSLEY, Bart.
Chief of the British Fascist Party in an interview with Thomas C. Watson, Central Press Canadian Writer

London, April 20.—President Franklin D. Roosevelt has organized his program for the rebuilding of the American economic system in such a way that if there were any organized Fascism in this country, I would recommend its whole-hearted support for President Roosevelt's program.

The American position at the moment emphasizes what was first exposed in most European countries rather than a new civilization. The American position is one of adjustment. What is Europe doing? What can Britain do?

The Communists seek to bring about this revolution by destroying the present system, as they did in Russia.

The Fascists, on the other hand while seeking to remedy the present system, do not seek to destroy it. They seek to bring about a new civilization out of the resultant chaos.

EASTER CANTATA

The beautiful Easter Cantata by Roy E. Nolle, entitled "Christ Victorious" was well rendered on Sunday evening by the choir of St. Paul's United Church, under the direction of Mrs. John F. MacKenzie. The cantata consisted of 22 voices, the solo parts being taken by Mrs. James Reith, Miss Grace Stevens, Messrs. Haasen Horncastle, G. W. McElroy, and D. H. VanWart. Others taking part in the duets, trios, and quartets, were: Mrs. G. W. McElroy, Mrs. D. A. McAlary, Miss Margaret McDavid, and Ralph MacDonell.

The various numbers of the Cantata were well sung, and the work of the full choir in the choruses was especially fine. Two really beautiful numbers were "Go to Dark Gethsemane" in key of D minor, and the final chorus with the exultant theme "O Lord, Thou art My God, I will Exalt Thee."

The church was taxed to its capacity to hear the Easter story told again in the beautiful words and music of this splendid cantata.

Others in the choir were Mrs. B. Morton, Mrs. V. Cooper, Mrs. Alan Tracy, Mrs. W. E. McDavid, Mrs. Ralph MacDonell, Mrs. V. H. Emory, Mrs. Scott Young, Mrs. Malcolm Amos, Miss Marjorie Young, Miss Evelyn Connolly, Miss Theodora Connelly, Miss Edna Hutchinson, and Shirley Ross.

CRITICAL COMMENT

BUY AT HOME

Here is the oration delivered by Mr. FRANCIS DICKINSON, Chairman of the High School Student, at the Oratorical Contest held March 25th, under the auspices of the I. O. G. T.

Among the many problems, which should be studied in connection with the present economic situation, Home Trading is one of the foremost. Home Trading, we the citizens of Edmundston should naturally be interested more particularly in that which should be defined as Town Trade.

It is a known fact in this town, that many people complain about the high prices of goods at the local town stores. But it is also known that many of these people, believing they can save a few cents and seeking to spite the local dealer, and make him lower his prices in order to regain the market, send elsewhere for their goods. Such a practice is so common that it has, to some extent, escaped public attention.

Those people remind us of "The man who took his price to spite his face." If they think they are spitting the local dealer or are bringing about a lowering of prices — they are not; they are spitting only themselves. For they are increasing the prices of goods at their local stores instead of decreasing them, and who but themselves will suffer later by these high prices.

A merchant cannot offer the prices he wishes; he must offer them as his business permits. If he pays a high price for his goods if only stands to reason that he must sell them at a high price and also if his sales are small he must sell his goods at a higher rate in order to meet his expenses. And this is exactly what happens in this town.

Most of the people do a large part of their trading with foreign merchants, they pay a high price for their goods, and then they come to this town and they find it difficult to get their goods at a high price. Therefore the only escape for the dealer is to increase his prices. And then these people wonder why the prices are so high if they would stop wondering and do a little more price trading, they would be far better off.

They give the local dealer no

OTHER THAN THEIR LOCAL MERCHANTS

chance to offer good bargains. They blame him for the high prices, but it is not his fault — it is their own; and, until the people realize this and do more home trading, the prices will not only remain high but may go even higher.

Every dealer in this town is striving to satisfy his customers, by giving them the best bargains possible. He does not mean to cheat, but if his customers will not do their part — He hasn't a chance! You must remember that any business depends upon its customers, and if those customers buy most of their goods from other than their local merchants, they cannot expect the best bargains and the lowest prices.

Now, when we say that the people should buy home goods, we do not mean that they should close out the rest of Canada. No; for there are many things that cannot be bought

PARLIAMENT HILL HEARS

By WILFRID EGLESTON

The House of Commons saw a cat in a comparatively recent acquisition. So far the Senate has followed suit. It keeps in the boiler room but occasionally takes tea with the stenographers in the "doggy" (short for cafeteria) on the fifth floor. My staff of trained investigators tells me that the cat has a regular beat, just like the members of the protective staff. In the course of his patrol every morning he enters the House of Commons barbers shop and the barber always knows what time it is when the cat appears. He tried to discover for readers of this column what breed it was, but all the answer I got was: "Just cat. You wouldn't think that parliament hill would go for anything less aristocratic than a Persian, but the House of Commons cat is built for action not for beauty."

As is not unbecoming a ship of state the darter nooks of the parliament building used to be infested with sewer rats. Since the House of Commons has moved to Ottawa, the rats are sticking to their sewers. Pussey doesn't have to live on rats, however. My reporters tell me that she is fed by compassionate members of the protective staff, who share with her their noon-day bottle of milk. There is even a rumor in circulation that the prime minister one day encountered the cat on the main floor, and made no demer, thus proving that cats may look at Bennett's, as well as at Kings. I heard a story which I find it difficult to credit, that during one of the more awful (I use the word reverently) plenary sessions of the Imperial Economic Conference the House of Commons cat was snuggled unobserved behind a screen and in the middle of perorations calculated to rock the empire's foundations, she demonstrated her private opinion of the whole show by snuggled off to sleep.

Out at High River where according to Senator Dan Bailey, the people are as bright as the weather they have already bolted down the budget to a sentence. With special reference to the export bonus on cattle they say: "Kale for the cattleman, but no cash for the farmer."

The senior member for Ottawa tells me that the most effective speech by DeWitt Foster of New Brunswick, whose name had previously attracted
