

64th Continues to Grow at Camp Sussex

Now 1,880 Men Under Canvas and Transfers Are Possible—Some Changes in 26th Announced—Major J. T. McGowan Going to France.

Forty-seven recruits have been enrolled in the No. 7 Army Service Corps by Lieut. H. R. Gunter, of Fredericton, who is in St. John for the purpose. The full company is nearly one hundred but as there are now 25 men on active service at Halifax and Sussex there are not who pass that way. It is hoped soon to hold small meetings at the rooms when some of the men in khaki will speak to the young men who have not yet got into uniform.

Major J. T. McGowan who has been in England writes to friends here that he is now about to go to France in charge of an ammunition base. He has secured a fine team of horses of which he is very proud. He says that he is very glad to be able to get to the front after about a year's work in England and was looking forward with interest to active service.

Lance Corporal Clark, of St. Stephen, returned to St. John on the way home yesterday having been discharged for medical reasons due to pneumonia in England from the 12th Battalion.

It is understood that the 6th Mounted Rifles are still in England. That is the reading of a cablegram received from CAPT. H. F. R. GRIFFITH, reported transferred from the 26th to the R. C. R.

Many vacancies left. Drill will begin in the army, St. John, in about a fortnight and instruction will be given in the evenings for about six weeks. There are now 1,880 men in Camp Sussex in the 64th Battalion. News of what is to be done of the number over an ordinary battalion is being awaited with interest and it is thought that when the six hundred men from New Brunswick that were counted on have been enrolled there will be "something doing". The actual number from this province which is to be sent to France, still a long way short of six hundred. Nothing further has been heard of the wintering quarters of troops at the St. John army.

The improvements made in the appearance of the Mill street office are calling forth the admiration of most people
