The failure that has so often overtaken the projectors of comic papers in Canada is accounted for by the semi-comic character of all our purely partisan papers, a class to which the greatest number of our journals belong. The treatment of the Huntington ing on the Square. I presume the public are aware the Square is now used as pasture grounds. Yours, &c., the reception of the evidence that has effectually exploded them, is the latest illustration of this feature of Canadian journalism. The pertinacity with which the truth of the charges was asserted before a tittle of evidence had been produced, the "hip, hip hurrah" with which the Allan letters, in not one Government in the face of a mass of evidence every particle of which refutes soft, shaven face, a stealthy glance and a general Jesuitical aspect, and near him, a tall, pompous, bald-headed person, "empty and fine," as Mr. Browning has it—We are not sure whether the conductors of the journals really imagine that whether they know they are laughed at, and, as the power of exciting laughter is one of the most profitable accomplishments of the age continue the farce with an eye to profits. The frenzied ravings in double leaders; the misleading head-

Our Railway Scandal and the American Press.

The ignorant commentaries of the United States press on the Pacific Railway Scandal are disgraceful to journalism. They are, in every instance that has come to our knowledge, superficial, flippant and misleading. The articles show that they have been written without any previous knowledge of Canadian affairs, and without any study of the question treated. Every writer—even editorial writers of the leading New York and Boston papers that claim to lead the world in journalistic enterprise—has evidently based his article on some partisan statement. In no paper is a court fool.
