

No. 26—The Stream, by D. A. Coulson, Toronto.

No. 67—A Pond in the Meadow, by Mrs. F. O. Baynes Reid, Brockville.

No. 35—Evensong, by M. O. Hammond, Toronto.

No. 57—Study, Miss G., by R. W. Magee, Toronto.

No. 11—The Gulls, by Fred Baird, Toronto.

Examples of the Amateur Photographer's Art

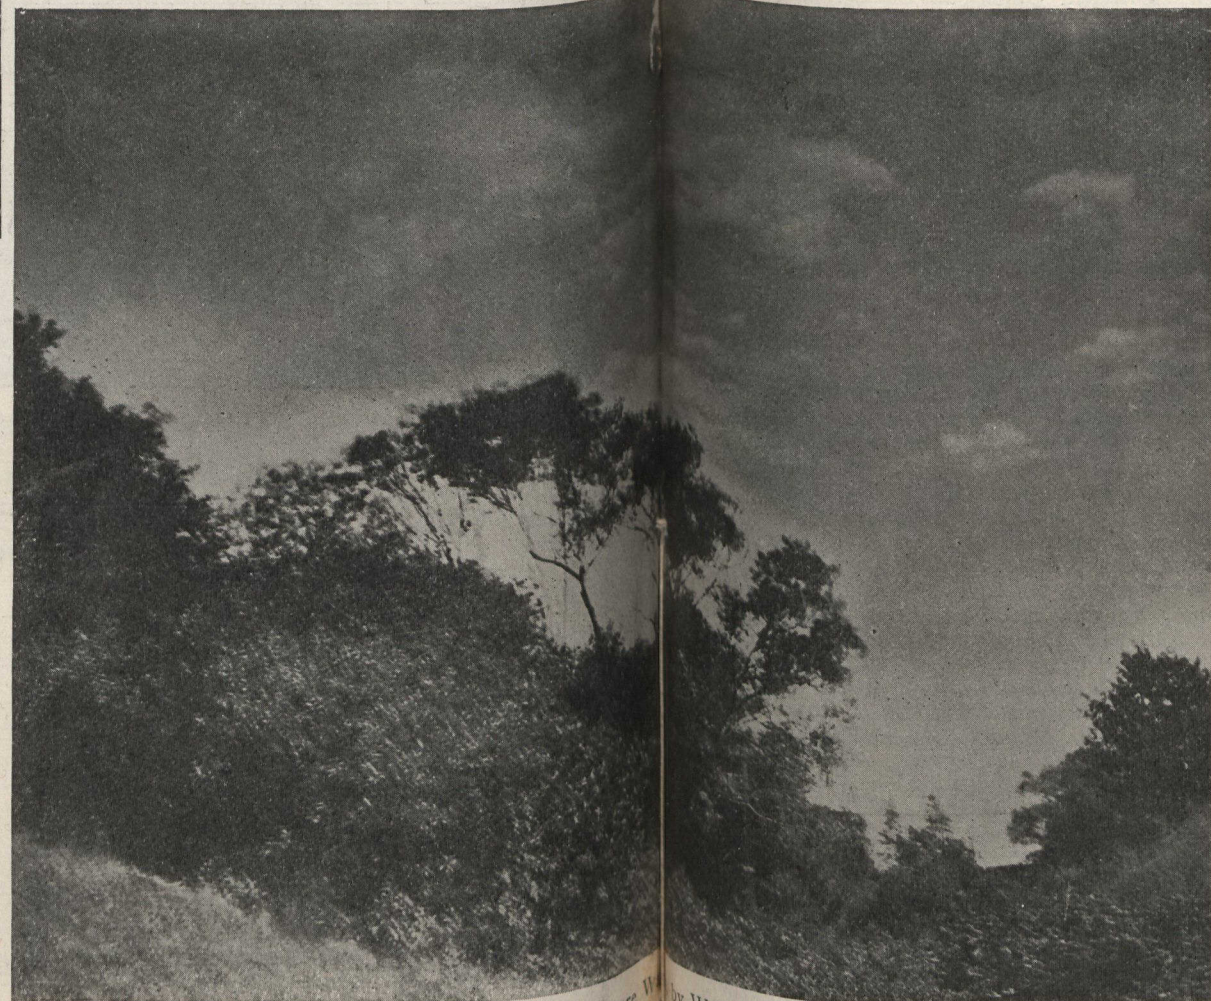

FROM THE 1909 SALON OF THE TORONTO CAMERA CLUB

THE TORONTO CAMERA CLUB

AFTER twenty-two years of active existence, the Toronto Camera Club finds itself more prosperous and more influential than at any stage in its career. It has nearly two hundred enthusiastic and earnest members and these are by no means all residents of Toronto. Its club-rooms, and general equipment are probably the best in Canada. Every Monday evening there are instructive meetings, talks, demonstrations and social entertainment. One Monday night in the month is "Open" and on these occasions, showing the latest amateur work in the United States, are usually displayed.

Every year there is a Club Exhibition and Salon to which the public are admitted free. This year's Salon is the best in some ways in the club's history; certainly, it has attracted more attention. The number of people who are interested in this pastime or hobby or art—whichever term may be used—is steadily increasing. If they are anxious to improve and to develop into art photographers they must needs join a camera club where the newest methods are demonstrated and explained.

The accompanying prints will give some idea of the nature of the work shown at this year's Salon, although it is impossible to reproduce the finer qualities of light and shade. Nevertheless it will be clear to every observer that amateur photography has more of art in it than is generally supposed.

No. 61—When Summer Days are Warm, by W. H. Moss, Toronto.

No. 48—Osier Willows, by W. Holbrook, Toronto.

No. 66—Mighty Wind, by B. B. Pinkerton, Montreal.

No. 4—The Beech Woods, by J. H. Ames, Toronto.

No. 34—Sunset, by A. G. Fraser, Toronto.

A General View of the 1909 Salon of Toronto Camera Club.