

GATES.

's Wing."

ION.

er Wrappers, 25c.

ick room, family

ness the Princess
een pleased

out it:

make one long to

where, amidst the
the old story from
have washed their
afflicted, this book
encouragement to tic, and the diction

the Redeemed wor-
are of a high order, s wrought out his

amidst the divine
on the Sabbath.

he was so enrapp-
aints."—Rev. W.

the Pearly Gates.
it has had such a
eph Wild, D.D.

style interesting.
and merits the ex-
brooklyn, N.Y.

to purchase a few
and dying? What ans of lifting the
ne glorious future

FEATHERS FROM AN ANGEL'S WING.

By Author of "Within the Pearly Gates."

THIRD EDITION.

Beautifully Bound in Cloth and Gilt, - Price 50 cts.

PAPER WRAPPERS, 25 CTS.

Just the book for a birthday present, reward of merit, the sick room, family or Sunday School Library.

"The author displays an imperial fancy, real imaginative force, and a wealth of descriptive writing seldom surpassed."—Rev. W.
Stephenson.

"Some of the passages are sublime, and penetrate the soul to its utmost depths."—Rev. W. Willan.

"The imagery is exuberant and highly creditable to the author, displaying considerable descriptive power and unusual capabilities for interesting and profiting the masses."—Rev. J. Petty, Principal of the Theological College, York, England.

"We very much admire the author's style and beauty of diction."
—Hamilton Times.

"The author has a powerful imagination, great command of language, and intense earnestness."—Toronto Globe.

"The style of the author is wonderfully picturesque, and the chastened imagination of the writer is displayed in every part."— Montreal Witness.

"The author has a descriptive power of no common order."—The late Rev. Dr. Guthrie, Edinburgh.

"'A Night of Festivity' is as fine a piece of descriptive writing as we ever saw, and in the hands of a good elocutionist would be a master-piece."—Methodist Times, England.

"I admire your book exceedingly. No Christian or thoughtful person can read it without feeling a deeper yearning for the good of others."—Alexander Munro, Brooklyn, N.Y.