

POULTRY YARD

Proper Food and Treatment for Young Chicks

A. G. Gilbert before Standing Committee of Ottawa

The chicks whether hatched by hens or incubators will give best results when hatched out in the first two weeks of May. In one of my reports it has been shown where the wives of farmers have used incubators and brooders with great success. In the case of the hen-hatched chickens the latter were permitted to remain in their nest for twenty-four or thirty-six hours, when with the mother hen they were placed in a slatted coop on the grass outside. The coop was so arranged that it could be securely closed at night while ventilation was secured. Through the slats the chickens could run on the grass outside, while the hen remained inside. On the floor of coop was dry earth to the depth of two inches. On taking the mother hen from her nest she was given food and water. She had been probably thirty-six hours on the nest bringing out her chickens and deserved the attention. Apart from this she would be more likely to brood the chicks contentedly, after being fed, than if hungry or thirsty. How important it is to have early chicks carefully brooded is well known to all experienced breeders.

FEEDING OF THE CHICKS

First day.—Little or no food is required. Towards end of the day a few stale bread crumbs may be fed. Second day.—Stale bread soaked in milk and squeezed dry may be given in small quantity. Feed a little at a time and leave none on the platform. A little hard boiled egg finely cut up may be added with benefit. Continue this for a day or two and add granulated oatmeal, finely crushed wheat may be given at this time. Continue the stale bread soaked in milk and granulated oatmeal for ten days, when finely crushed corn may be added to the foregoing with advantage. After 14 days give whole wheat in small quantity at first.

As the chickens grow older they should be given a mash composed of stale bread, shorts, cornmeal, ground meat, etc. Finely cut bone or meat will be found a great incentive to growth at this stage. On the chickens becoming eight weeks of age their rations may be dropped to three a day. Care should be taken that they are generously fed at last ration. For drink give skimmed milk and water.

When fully feathered the mothers of the hen-hatched chicks should be removed from them. The chickens will be found to return to their coops as usual, and they are allowed to remain in them until removed to more commodious quarters in colony houses. On the incubator-hatched chickens becoming too large for the brooders they should be removed to colony houses.

FATTENING FOR MARKET

Should the farmer desire to specially fatten his chickens before sale, or shipment, his simplest and speediest plan is to put his birds at 3 1/2

4 or 4 1/2 months of age, in slatted coops or crates divided in compartments to hold one, or a number of birds up to four. These coops should have V-shaped feeding troughs in front. The following fattening ration has been found most effective in our poultry department: Two parts finely ground oat; one part finely ground barley; one part ordinarily ground oatmeal. After 15th day add bent suet in proportion of one ounce to every four birds. Mix with skim-milk. If the milk is made near boiling point the tallow, which should be chopped fine, will be melted by it when poured on the ground oatmeal. Or the tallow may be melted in the hot milk. The birds should be fed all they will eat twice a day. Carefully collect all uneaten food. Leave none to turn sour, and feed none in that condition.

Care should be taken to free the birds from vermin before cooping. This may be done by dipping the sulphur water into the feathers, or by one of the lice-exterminating powders.

Incubation of Chicks

Bulletin 163 of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, is devoted entirely to the "Incubation of Chickens."

The first article is from the pen of W. R. Graham, poultry manager at the Agricultural College, Guelph. The professor discusses the question of heavy losses in flocks of artificially hatched chickens, and endeavors to locate the cause as far as his studies and experiments have gone.

The first advice is to carefully consider the methods of selecting eggs for incubation, as well as the methods of feeding and brooding the chickens before drawing conclusions. Series of experiments have been conducted, both with the eggs from the college pens, and eggs procured from an ordinary flock. The results have been mostly in favor of the hen for an incubator, as against the machines. The matter of fault lies in the incubation, feeding and brooding, or is from inferior breeding stock, is the point yet undetermined in the mind of the professor, and his assistants, and the cause of the faulty laboratory results appear to have been obtained since the use of Zenoleum has been adopted, and special comment is made on this point.

During incubation, the thermometers were kept as near 100 degrees as possible, and many experiments as to the amount of moisture necessary, were conducted.

The method of feeding was the same for both brooder and hen-raised chicks, but not much difference in vitality was noted. Interesting experiments were made in order to produce a sufficient quantity of carbon dioxide in the incubators, by the use of a certain bacteria culture in milk, but the success of the trials is not yet definite enough to be given as authority. The use of buttermilk for moisture, however, appeared to be beneficial.

Complete tables of the records of all experiments are given, and make interesting data.

The second article on "Humidity, in Relation to Incubation," by W. H. Day, lecturer in Physics, is a scientific dissertation on the moisture in the air, and a study of the moisture in incubators and under hens when incubating.

It was found that under a hen the moisture was 25 to 50 per cent. greater than in the incubator, but at the same time evaporation of the egg under the hen was greater than in the machine, a fact that could apparently only be reconciled by the existence of a better circulation

END YOUR ROOF TROUBLES WITH

A Roof that Really Protects

The more carefully you study the subject of Ready Roofings the more you will be convinced of the great superiority of AMATITE.

The average buyer sends to a few advertisers for samples, picks out one that looks tough, and sends in his order to the nearest dealer.

If the dealer doesn't keep the kind he selects some other kind which he has is generally bought instead.

That is, a good way to get a leaky roof.

The careful buyer is more particular. He knows that any roofing will last for a little while without attention, but he wants to postpone the time and cost of renewal as long as possible.

He is figuring next year's cost as well as this year's cost. He thinks of the money he will have to spend after a few years for a new roof if this one won't last any longer. If he can get a better roofing at equal cost that will last longer, he is so much the gainer.

That kind of calculation is called thrift. The thrifty buyer sees important differences between AMATITE and the other roofings.

The other roofings either require a coating with a special liquid every year or two, or periodical painting. Right or wrong, it is a future expense to be counted by the thrifty buyer.

His judgment swings toward AMATITE, because it needs no painting either at the time it is laid or afterward. Once it is on you have no further bother or expense.

Then again, AMATITE has wonderful durability.—

First, because it has a mineral surface. Doesn't it seem reasonable to believe that a top covering of oil-sheared stone will resist the wear of storms better than a roofing with a smooth or unprotected surface?

Second, it contains solid layers of Coal Tar Pitch—the material which is used by the best engineers for waterproofing deep cellars, tunnels, etc. Doesn't it seem reasonable to suppose that this offers better protection against water than materials which are never used for such severe service?

One more argument. Weight for weight, AMATITE is the lightest in price of any mineral surfaced Ready Roofing.

These, then, are some of the reasons why thrifty people buy AMATITE—It costs nothing to maintain; it has remarkable durability; and its first cost is very low.

There are more arguments for AMATITE than these. Our Booklet tells them. Sent with Free Sample for a postal to nearest office.
