GOSSIP.

Wonder if the newspaper people who are continually prating about needing "a new breed of dairymen" ever stopped to think that perhaps the breed of dairy writers might be improved.—[Jersey Bulletin.

"Oh, John!" she exclaimed, "now that you've seen my new bonnet you simply can't regret that I got it. Isn't it—just a poem?"

"Well, if it is," replied John, "I guess a proper title for it would be Ode to a Milliner."

One of the old-time stage coach drivers, who had been on the road over half a century, says that life is put together considerably like a set of harness. There are the traces of care, lines of trouble, bits of good fortune, breaches of good manners, bridled tongues, and everybody has to tug to pull together.

A Southern planter was asking one of his colored servants about her wedding. "Yes, suh," she said, "it was jes the fines' weddin' you ever see—six bridesmaids, flowers everywhere, hundreds ev' guests, music, an' er heap er prayin'."

"Indeed," commented her master, "and I suppose Sambo looked as handsome as any of them."

An embarrassed pause. "Well, no—not 'xactly, sir. Would yer believe it, dat fool nigger nebber showed up!"

Miss Paula Edwards, who spent the summer travelling in the Far East, says that the Mohammedan religion permits of more evasions than does the Raines law.

"The faithful are forbidden to paint any live object," she relates, "and yet I frequently saw in Constantinople pictures of birds and animals. One day I commented on this fact. The guide and I had stopped before a canvas showing two doves.

"Here is an artist," I remarked, 'who has allowed his enthusiasm to get away with his scruples. His picture represents something alive.

"Not at all," returned the guide. "If madame will look more closely she will see that these birds are not alive. A bullet hole has been painted in the breast of each."

"I RECKON NOT."

The more I see of long-time milk records, and the more I study the cows or their photographs, the less I know about what a cow is worth, as a dairy producer, by looking at her. There are certain rules laid down for judging a cow. There are men who profess to know what a good cow looks like. She has a wedge here, a bony eminence there, a fullness here, a certain look there, an udder of such a size and shape—just follow the rules and you are sure to get—most anything from a good-for-nothing to a rattling good animal. These wise men will say: "She ought to be a good one." "How much butter will she make?" "Well, I can't say." No, I reckon not. It will take two years to find out. It's like marriage. You get better acquainted the longer you live together.—[Kimball's Dairy Farmer.

Mr. Sato, of the Japanese Peace Commission, praised in Portsmouth the pleasant and stimulating coolness of the American summer in New England.

"We have hot summers in Japan," said Mr. Sato. "We have hot-weather stories there, too. For instance:

"A philanthropic Japanese rode through the streets one scorching day when a beggar woman accosted him, holding a baby in her arms.

"Kind sir," she said, 'will you not give a copper coin to your servant, who is in sore need?'

"Yes, gladly," said the gentleman, and he took out a handful of small change.

"But just as he was about to give this to the woman he chanced to look closely at her baby, and, behold, it was only a great doll.

"Why," he cried, 'that baby is a fraud, a sham.'

"Yes, your honor," said the woman humbly. 'It was so hot I left the real one home to-day.'

ADVERTISE IN THE ADVOCATE.

"Lookie here, young feller," said Deacon Korntop, "you bin a-makin' up to our Berthy for some time."

"Yes, sir," replied the bashful young farmer.

"Waal, I want to know ef you're goin' to marry her."

"So do I; but I jest hain't got the spunk to ask her."

Mr. W. W. Ballantyne, Ayrshire breeder of Stratford, Ont., reports the sale of three bulls and four heifers to three gentlemen from Japan who were buying for the Government farm. The shipment consisted principally of Ayrshires, which speaks well for the breed, as they have been in recent years importing from Scotland.

He opened the door cautiously and poking in his head in a sort of suggestive way, as if there was more to follow, enquired, "Is this the editorial rinktum?"

"The what, my friend?"

"Is this the rinktum—sintum—santum or some such place, where the editors live?"

"This is the editorial room; yes, sir. Come in."

"No, I guess I won't come in. I wanted to see what an editorial sactum was like, that's all. Looks like our garret, only wuss. Good day."

"Nutsy," the janitor in a freshmen dormitory at Amherst College, was in the habit of extinguishing the corridor lights at 1 o'clock each night. The freshmen planned a joke on "Nutsy," and arranged a pall of water over a door where a certain light was, in such a manner as to automatically tip over on the janitor on that auspicious night, and prepared to watch the fun.

Night came, and with it "Nutsy" and the freshmen all apparently asleep. "Nutsy" extinguished the light with the desired result.

He opened one of the dormitory doors and called out: "Well, boys, let's light up." And there, drenching wet, to their consternation, stood George Harris, D. D., LL.D., President of Amherst. "Nutsy" happened to be ill, and the president himself had attended to the duty.

Mr. R. P. Cooper, the senior partner of the widely-known firm, William Cooper & Nephews, whose sheep dips are so popular with stockmen, made an enviable record on his pure-bred live stock at the last exhibition of the Royal Agricultural Society of England. He secured no less than 13 prizes and two reserves. His Shorthorn bull, "Meteor," took second in a class of 44. With the famous Ashlyns Redpolls, Mr. Cooper secured first for a bull born in 1903, and second for the 1904 animal; also third and reserve in the heifer class. In Shropshire sheep, Mr. Cooper took no less than 11 prizes in seven different classes. In the selling class, in which there were no less than 67 entries, and in which the keenest competition existed, Mr. Cooper was first, second, third, and fifth, a fact which speaks volumes for the uniformity of the flock. With one exception, all the stock was of his own breeding.
