

Cures Caked Udders Over Night

Saskatchewan Stockman's Experience With Douglas' Egyptian Liniment.

The stockman, and more particularly the dairy farmer, has to keep a sharp lookout for caked udders, for he knows how seriously trouble of this kind is likely to affect the milk production of his herd.

Mr. W. Robinson, of Ituna, Sask., does not worry about it any more, however, for he has found a quick and certain cure.

He says: "I have used your Egyptian Liniment with splendid results. I have had cows calve at night with their udders so badly caked that it was impossible to milk them, but after one application of your Liniment they were all right the next morning."

Caked Udders demand quick action. The safest, wisest plan is to keep a bottle of Douglas' Egyptian Liniment always on hand.

Questions and Answers. Veterinary.

Digestive Trouble.

Pigs were born late in September. They are fed oil cake, gluten meal, milk, dry oats, and corn. Two of them stagger when they walk, and suddenly fall headlong. They do not fail in flesh. One died after five days' illness. The day before it died I tried to give it some medicine, but could not open its mouth. Is it contagious? E. G. W.

Ans.—This is digestive trouble that affects the brain. It is not contagious. Purge each with 3 ounces Epsom salts, and follow up with 4 grains nux vomica three times daily. Get all grain chopped, and sift the hulls out of the oat chop. Feed lightly on grain. Give milk, shorts, a little chop, and raw roots, and see that they get regular exercise. V.

Parturient Paresis.

Cow calved Saturday morning. Sunday night she would not eat or drink, and gave little milk. Monday morning she could not get up. We tried to lift her with ropes, but failed. I gave her pepper and ginger, and a pint of raw oil. She died about 11 o'clock. A. D. N.

Ans.—This was a case of parturient paresis, commonly called milk fever. If you had sent for a veterinarian, he would have inflated the udder with oxygen or sterilized air, with an apparatus especially designed for the purpose, and this would have effected a cure. In these cases the cow loses the power of swallowing, and part of the fluid you gave her no doubt passed down the windpipe to the lungs and hastened death. Cows in this state should not be given anything in the mouth. V.

Miscellaneous.

Stopping Growth of Horns.

What is used for killing horns on calves, in what quantity used, and at what age should the calves' horns be treated? FARMER.

Ans.—Use caustic potash. Rub a little on the scars before the calf is two weeks old. It may be purchased in the form of a stick or pencil.

Hens Eating Eggs.

What can be done to prevent hens from eating eggs? I was troubled all last summer, and now, when I have them shut in, they are eating them again. D. S. H.

Ans.—Clipping about one-eighth of an inch off the end of the bill has been recommended, and raising the nests off the floor so that the eggs would not be seen. It would also be well to separate the offenders from the rest of the flock. A correspondent advises as follows: "If you feed a handful of flour of sulphur to a two-quart measure of chopped oats and barley, wet with skim milk or butter-milk, just so as to make it thick, and if you feed the sulphur for four or five days, then stop a while and repeat at intervals. I think it will have the desired results."

Right of Watering Place.

About twenty-five years ago A granted to B the right of a watering-place on his property. About twelve years ago, A died, C coming into possession and remaining three years. Since then D has had possession, B having undisputed use of watering-place until now, but not making continuous use of it, and not keeping fence in repair this last two years. No money was paid between A and B.

1. Has B any right now?
2. If not, why not?

Ontario. J. H. R.

Ans.—We cannot give definite answers to your questions without more information than is contained in your statement of facts. For instance, there is reference to a grant of the easement in question, but it is not stated how the grant was made, whether by deed or otherwise; and there is the suggestion that there was a condition attached to it, namely, that the grantee should keep a fence in repair. And there are other matters important to be considered, and as to which the statement contains no information. We think it likely that B is still entitled to enjoy the water privilege in question, but for the reason above mentioned we cannot speak definitely.
