Alberta Farmers' Parliament

or the Department of Extension of the University, was quite willing to provide correspondence courses for pupils de-sirous of continuing their education in that way. The question of better edu-cation for children in rural schools was, however, a blower question that that that way. The question of better edu-cation for children in rural schools was, however, a bigger question than that. It involved the remaking of their teaching force in rural school districts and the provision of better school buildings. Plans had been prepargd by the department for school buildings which could be used as social centres, libraries, etc. At the present time there were in many cases three or four poor school buildings where one good building would give far better service. He also had a plan which had the ap-proval of the minister of education to organize night schools in the rural schools, with the aid of the Department of Education. It was also important that local school districts should be taken by paying them good salaries and to give financial encouragement to these teachers who fitted themselves to teach agriculture in rural schools. Dean Holmes, of the faculty of agri-culture, University of Alberta, in a convincing spaceth discussed the need for agricultural education in order to better fit young people for farm tife. A system of agricultural education had now been ustablished in Alberta to teach agriculture, beginning with boys and girls in rural schools, continuing in special agriculture, schools, and for those who wished to continue their edu-cation further, a faculty of agriculture had been established at the University

Red Cross Society

Red Cross Society F. M. Black, president of the Calgary board of trade, appealed to the con-vention on behalf of the Alberta divi-sion of the Red Cross Society. Follow-ing Mr. Black's speech a collection was taken up and realized $273.55, including a donation of $50 from Rice Sheppard. Gerald Robinson gave a financial state-ment of the Red Cross Society, and repudiated the suggestion that funds were being swallowed up in big salaries to officials.

Guide's Progress

George F. Chipman, editor of The Guide, informed the convention that since the last convention, when the delegates authorized the raising of the subscription price of The Guide from one dollar to one dollar and fifty cents, more subscriptions had been received at the increased rate than were received at the increased rate than were received in the previous year at one dollar. The step had been from every viewpoint an exceptional success, and The Guida was today in hetter shape financially than it had ever been befare. (Applause.)
