JAMES GORDON BENNETT DEAD

Bealieu, France, May 14.-James Gordon Bennett, proprietor of the New York Herald, died at 5.30 this morning, after having been unconscious for two days.

Mr. Bennett's last words before relapsing into unconsciousness were in relation to his newspaper interests. Mrs. Bennett was with her husband when he died.

Dispatches from France early this month reported Mr. Bennett so seriously ill that his condition was giving serious cause for anxiety.

James Gordon Bennett, one of the most original and picturesque figures in international journalism, and undoubtedly the greatest genius among the publishers of American newspapers of his time, was born in New York City, May 10, 1841, the only son of James Gordon Bennett, founder of the Herald. He received his education from private tutors and was carefully trained for his journalistic career by his father. To build up a great newspaper had been the leading purpose of the father's life, and it is said that his last injunction to his son was to sustain and develop that which he had created Old Bennett died in 1872, and his son fell heir to his large fortune and to the Herald, which had been the pride of his father. Young Bennett faithfully complied with his father's wish and, in doing so, displayed all the energy, sagacity, varied ability, personal probity, and tremendous enterprise that had distinguished his
