They Both Indulged in Little Personali ties Which Seemed to Please Their Audience.

In 1858 Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas had a joint debate on the college grounds of Knox college, Galesburg. It was a great meeting, and I shall never forget the tremendous enthusiasm that was manifested by the respective partisans of each of these great men. Mr. Douglas had the opening and conclusion, and he got in one shot on Mr. Lincoln that was so pat that even the adherents of that gentleman had to join in the laughter.

Mr. Lincoln, in the course of his re marks, twitted his opponent with making only one speech-a set oration which he delivered to each new audience, the suggestion being that he was incapable of changing his stock ad-

In reply Mr. Douglas said that he admitted the charge, and conceded that his rival knew in advance what he was going to say. He wished that he could foretell with the same exactness what Mr. Lincoln was going to say, but alas! that was impossible, since he changed his argument to suit his audiences, making a fierce abolition talk in communities where that sentiment was strongly entertained, as at Galesburg, but in southern Illinois ignoring abolition and standing up squarely as an old time Whig:

A Good Natured Dog.

A very ordinary looking farm horse harnessed to an old wagon stood by the curb, and on the board that served for a seat lay a small dog of such mixed blood that no guess could be made as to his breed.

As a delivery wagon passed on the opposite side of the street a large red apple fell off. Before it stopped rolling the dog bounded across the street, picked it up with his teeth and with tail wagging rushed back to the horse, in front of which he stood up on his hind legs while the apple was taken from his mouth.

As the horse munched the apple he made the peculiar little noise that horses make when petted, and doggie replied with throaty little barks which plainly told what a pleasure it had been to go after that apple. Then he went back to his nap on the wagon seat.-Burlington Free Press.

INK AS A FACE WASH

Using it for Writing Purposes Nearly Cost This Traveller His Life.

King St. East of Market, Chatham Found Some in a Hottentot Village-Saved by a British Man-of war

> A British traveler in Africa, weary nd exhausted, was received hospitably one evening in the kraal of a Hot-his writing materials when his eye fell on a glass vessel standing on a bamboo shelf, which, on closer inspection. proved to be a genuine ink pot nearly full to the brim. Delighted at the discovery, he sat down and worked away at his diary Suddenly he was disturbed in his occu pation by a young negress, who springing toward him, snatched the ink pot from the table in passionate haste Her agonizing screams soon attract ed the other members of the family and the unsuspecting stranger was soon made aware that he had committed the beinous offense of laying sacrilegious hands on the carefully guarded provision of ink which the rich aunt of the monarch had bought from a European trader as a toilet preparation for improving the complexion.

The explorer was forthwith arrested and sentenced to death, and the edict would have been put into execution had not a British man-of-war arrived in the bay. The captain, learning of his countryman's exploit, promptly intervened and appeased the irate royal house by a gift of half a pint of black ink. The Safest Part of a Train. A party of travelers in a train were talking over their traveling experience and the danger of accidents, and finally the question arose as to the safest part of the train. Failing to settle the question among themselves, they called on the guard, and one of them said to him:

"Guard, we have been discussing the matter of the safest part of the train and want to know your opinion." "Want to know the safest part, ch?" replied the guard.

"Yes, that's it." "Well." continued the guard, "I've been on the line for 15 years and have been turned over embankments, busted' up in tunnels, dumped off of bridges, telescoped in collisions, blown off the line by cyclones, run into open switches and had other pleasant incidental divertisements of a kindred nature, and I should say, gentlemen, that the safest part of the train was that part which happened to be in the works for repairs at the time of the accident."-London Telegraph.

It has been held that consumption hereditary, and the fact that one per-son of a family had died with con-sumption was considered a sure sign that others of that family could not escape it. This is partly true and partly untrue. A man with weak lungs is likely to transmit that weakness to his children. But there is no reason in the world why the weakness should the world why the weakness should be allowed to develop. Keep the lungs full of rich, red, wholesome blood, and the weakness will disappear. Decay-ing ing tissues will be thrown off, and new material will be added until the lungs are well and perfectly strong again. This is the thing that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery does. This is what makes it cure 98 per cent of all cases of consumption where it is taken according to directions. The Red Star Store is a leader. It situated on the corner of Baldoon and Head streets, and its preparations for the Christmas trade were made on a large scale. A Planet reporter was shown over the store Wednesday and he found the stock complete in every detail. In addition to a large supply of all the choicest groceries, there were candies of every description to delight the children at Christmas. A specialty is made by the Red Star Store of teas. There you can get the famous Aurora tea for 35 cents a lb. This tea is cer-tainly the best value for the money in the market. Besides the Aurora tea, this store handles all the higher grades of Chinese, Japan and Ceylon

The Planet was surprised to see large stock of crockery, hina and glass-ware on exhibition in ex-Ald, Dyer's store. The display is certainly a credit to the proprietor. Some very special values are shown in dishes especially for the Christmas trade. Remember this place when doing your shopping. The Red Star Store is the only place in North Chatham that carries a full line of crystal ware.

E. J. MACINTYRE.

The universal verdict of an admiring public is that E. J. MacIntyre has one of the handsomest windows, and most elaborate display of holiday goods in the city. Many and varied have been the enconiums passed upon his excel-lent taste in securing such an elegant Christmas stock. The store contains everything in the goldsmith and silver-smith lines and Mr. MacIntyre is always there ready and willing to please. The brilliance of the store is still further increased by the bright set tings of silver plates, pearls, diamonds rubies, gold watches, chains, lockets etc. Amid it all E. J. beams and rejoices that it is Christmas. He does so because he has sold more than loub'e the glasses this year than il together last year.
