BOOKS MOST IN DEMAND.

Dickens Selling Better To-day Than Ever Before.

Some Recent Novels Are Very Popular This Summer.

Opinion of Librarian Hunter and the Booksellers.

What are the books being most widely read in Hamilton at the present time? Around such a question hangs a great deal of interest. Is the thin piping voice of the modern novel being heard above the more philosophical chorus of the old time classics? Do the works of biography and travel absorb the interest of readers in the city? Are the people of Hamilton making themselves familiar with the history of their own country and of other countries, too, and with the men and incidents that has immortalized nations? Are the citizens lovers of the poets, who by their masterful verse gave to the world an outlook on the beautiful, that tends to make readers doubly ap preciative?

The Times has made careful inquiries as to the books the citizens are reading mostly, at the present time, and thanks to the kindness and courtesy of Librarian Hunter and his assistants, a fair estimate of the most popular books that are being borrowed from the Public Library has been obtained. According to the rary has been obtained. According to the list gathered from statistics kept at the library, works of fiction stand first in being the most popular. The authors the citizens are reading mostly are as follows: Dickens, Muichback, Correlli, Scott, Grant, James, Mrs. Humphrey Ward, Tracey, Oppenheim, White, J. Hocking, McCutcheon and Lever. The popular works of biography are: "Life of James Robertson," by Connor; "Reminiscences of Lady Churchill," "Life of Henry Irving," by Stoker; "My Story," by Elien Terry; and "The Story of My Life," by Keller.

Popular works of travel: "Stoddard's Lectures," "The Other Side of the Lantern," by Treves; "The Spell of Italy," by Mason, and "The Conquest of the Great Northwest," by Laut.

The works of history most popular are, "Creever Papers," "Percentenary History of Canada," by Tracey; "Over Sea Britain," by Knight, and "The Dawn of Russia," by Morrison.

Philosophy and poetry range in popularity as follows: "Stato Resartus," by Carlyle: "Sesame and Lillies," by Rushin, they worke of Victor, Hung, Li been obtained. According to the gathered from statistics kept at the the Bookseller and Stationer give the following six as the best sellers: "Inner Shrine." anonymous: "Marriage-a-la-Mode," by Mrs. Humphrey Ward; "Man in Lower Ten," by Rinehart; "Katrine." by Elinor Macartney Lane: "White Miee," R. H. Davis; and "White Sister." by F. M. Crawford.

The Bookseller and Stationer obtain their information from a section of the booksellers of the city. However, the Times, not content to accept their statement as final, made inquiries from each of the principal booksellers in the city. R. Duncan & Co. stated that the two best sellers with them are, "Inner Strine" and "Marriage-a-la-Mode."

the light modern novel is selling remarkably well at this time of the year, particularly owing to people going on their holidays preferring something light to read. Undoubtedly, the light novel is the most popular with the public to-day.

What is the reason? It is thought by many that in these stremuous days and the burry and bustle the times demand, people have not time to settle down to the more heavy literature of the classics.

literature of the classics.

However, in spite of the market being flooded with the innumerable works of new authors, the local booksellers say that Dickens' books are selling to-day better than ever. Such a statement is gratifying to a degree, for it is corroborative proof that the citizens are still lovers of those immortal descriptions of human life as true to-day as they ever were.

A very brief outline of the contents of "Inner Shrine" and "Marriage-a-la-Mode" would no doubt interest readers of the Times.
