THE LATE GENERAL SIR R. CHURCH. On the Death of Sir Richard Church at Athens on the 20th ult., the Greek Government expressed to her Majesty's Minister at Athens, Mr. Stuart, their earnest desire that he should be buried at the expense of the Greek nation in that part of the public cemetery set apart for the remains of the soldiers who fought in the war of Independence. Accordingly, the funeral took place on the 27th March. The garrison of Athens was under arms, and all officers and men belonging to the Military and naval services who were at the time at Athens were present in full uniform. The officers, seamen, and marines, of Her Majesty's ship Rapid, Stationed at the Piræus, also took part in the procession. It was headed by the troops with music, who were followed by the clergy, preceding the hearse drawn by four horses. The pall was borne by officers military and naval, of the highest rank; and the body was followed by the Hon. W. Stuart, C. B., Her Majesty's Minister at Athens, as chief mourner, representing General Church's relatives, and accompanied by the General's Aide-de-Camp, Colonel Theagines. After the body came the Council of Ministers, the national Assembly, the members of the Holy Synod, the officers of the Court the authorities, military and judicial and all the administrative, legal, scientific educational, and commercial bodies of the capital. The body was carried to the English Church, where it was met at the door by the King of Greece and the Duke of Glücksburg; the Archbishops of Athens and Corfu were present, standing within the alter-rails. The first portion of The English Burial Service was read in the chapel by a very old and attached friend of General Church, the Rev. Dr. Hill. The procession then moved to the cemetery, where Dr. Hill finished the funeral service. Funeral orations were delivered at the grave, in Greek and English, by distinguished Greek citizens—one of them the Minister of Justice. The display of sympathy, respect, and affection on the part of the people of the Capital, where the General had been so long a resident, was warm and universal. The funeral was a genuinely national tribute to a character of high honor and entire disinterestedness.

THE SEAL FISHING.—Yesterday the Arctic arrived in Dundee from the seal fishery, at which she has been comparatively successful. She brings the produce of 5,800 seals, which will yield about 650 tons of oil. Capt. Adams reports that his chances of success were to a large extent interfered with in consequence of the ship having been for several days beset in the ice. Her position at one time was so precarious that the seamen removed their clothes to the ice, and were in constant expectation of seeing the vessel crushed to pieces. At the time he spoke the other vessels of the Dundee fleet, on the 4th of April, with the exception of the Esquimaux and Victor, they were clean. The former vessel had 110 tons of oil, and the latter 60. The Peterhead vessels have been, on the whole, very fortunate. Of the foreign vessels, the best fished are the Norwegian. Some of the sailing vessels are also pretty well fished. When seen by Capt. Adams, the German and Swedish ships were empty. Capt. Adams states that after he left, the ships might have encountered other shoals of seals, and so the catches reported may have been much improved.—London Times, April 20.
