THE DOG NUISANCE

Not only do the thousands of dogs in the country consume a vast amount of food that could be used in various ways to relieve the shortage of food for human consumption, in the raising of pigs for instance, but the damage some of them do in destroying sheep, and, sometimes, other animals, is a source of great and entirely unnecessary waste. Lately, part of the dog population of Newcastle have taken to raiding hen pens. At least three poultry raisers have met with severe losses from that cause. One gentleman had twenty-four valuable fowls killed by a pack of dogs, another lost twenty-two of his flock, and a third lost seven, all that he had. The dogs were evidently besides themselves, as they did not eat any of the hens but killed as many as they could and left them lying on the ground. These same dogs, three in number, will likely, if not soon killed be heard from in further raids. The killing of sheep by dogs is old story, and wonders why the suffering public have put with the nuisance so long. Now, that the item of food is so important, the breeding of dogs should be restricted and those now living should be thinned out leaving but, none but the most useful. One good way to restrict the number of useful dogs would be to greatly increase the municipal tax on them.

A Good Digestion

Depends Upon Keeping the Blood Rich, Red and Pure

To be able to eat what you want and to digest it properly is a priceless blessing. Good digestion is not appreciated until you lose it. Then you cannot afford to experiment, for strong medicines are hard on weak stomachs. If you have indigestion do not be persuaded into believing you can cure yourself by the use of predigested foods or so called stomach tonics. There is no tonic for every part of the body. It is through the blood that the stomach gets its power to assimilate and digest food, and as the blood goes to every part of the body any improvement in its condition not only results in strengthening the stomach but every organ in the body. Rich red blood is absolutely necessary to good digestion. If your stomach is weak and you are troubled with sour risings in the throat, a feeling of pressure about the heart, or nausea after eating, try the tonic treatment with Dr Williams' Pink Pills. So many dyspeptics have been cured by this medicine that every sufferer from stomach trouble should try it. You will soon know the joy of good digestion and enjoy better health in other ways if you give this medicine a fair trial. Mr Fred J Kendall, Darkest Ave. Toronto says: "For upwards of five years I was a great sufferer from indigestion, which gradually undermined my general health, leaving me in a weak and anemic condition. I spent considerable money with one doctor and another, but failed to receive any lasting benefit, and had become quite discouraged. One day my wife urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills but I thought it would be the same old story. But she had so much faith in them that she got me a box, and to please her I began taking them. By the time the box was finished, I noticed a slight improvement, and I continued taking them and soon found myself gaining. I could sleep better and my appetite improved, without the distressing symptoms that had previously followed eating. I think I took in all about a dozen boxes, and to-day I am a stronger man than I ever was in my life. When I began the use of the pills I weighed 143 pounds, while now I weigh 167. You may use this letter as soon as you choose, hoping it may reach some poor, discouraged sufferer as I was."

You can get Dr Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Dominion Express Money Order for five dollars costs three cents.

"There she goes!" yelled the sailor in charge of the line. He began to haul in the slack like a madman.

A dark figure loomed downward through the mist as Hozler, alone, coming back to them. A frenzied cheer broke from the lips of those overwrought men. They knew what that meant. Somewhere high above the black rocks and the flying sea was hope, thrown in the blessed sunshine. They drew him in cautiously until Coke was able to grasp his hand. They were quick to see that he brought a second rope and a spare whip.

"Two at a time on both ropes," was his inspiring message. "They're friendly Portuguese up there, but no one must be seen if a boat is sent from the island to find out what has become of the ship. So step lively! Now, captain, tell 'em off in pairs."

Coke's method was characteristic. He literally fell on the two nearest men and began to truss them. Hozler followed his example and tied two others back to back. They vanished, and the ropes returned, much more speedily this time. Four and four again were drawn up to safety. There were left the captain, Hozler and the unhappy Watts, who was now crying because the skipper had "set above" him just for "singing" a reel old wind-jammer song.

"You must take up this swine," said Coke to Hozler, dragging Watts to his feet with scant ceremony. "If I lay me 'ands on 'im I'll be tempted to throttle 'im."

Before getting the deck Hozler helped to adjust the remaining rope around the captain's portly person. They were lifted clear of the trembling forecastle almost simultaneously and in the very nick of time. Already the skeleton of the ship's hull was beginning to slip off into deep water. The deck was several feet lower than at the moment of the vessel's final impact against the rocks. Ever before the three reached the ledge from which their rescuers were swept away, the foremast fell, the forehold and forecattle were riotously flooded by the sea, and Watts, who was capable of using his eyes might have seen his deadly enemies, the rats, swarming in hundreds to the tiny platform that still rose above the destroying waves. Soon even that frail set was shattered. When the keel and garboard strake plates snapped all that was left of the Andromeda toppled over, and the cavern she had invaded rang with a fierce note of triumph as the next wave thundered in without hindrance.

It was indeed a new and strange world on which she looked when able to breathe again. Once more. During that terrible ascent she had retained but slight consciousness of her surroundings. She knew that Hozler and herself were drawn close to a bulging rock, that her companion clutched at it with hands and knees and thus feuded her delicate limbs from off its broken surface; she felt herself half carried, half lifted, up into free air and dazzling light; she heard voices in a musical foreign tongue uttering words that had the ring of sympathy.

Friendly hands placed her in a warm and snug chair and she lay there, unable to think or move. By degrees the numbness of body and mind gave way to clearer impressions. But she took much for granted. For instance, it did not seem an unreasonable thing that the familiar faces of men from the Andromeda should gather near her on an uneven shelf of rock strewn with broken bowlders and the litter of sea birds. She recognized them vaguely, and their presence brought a new confidence.
