THE EGG OR THE CHICKEN?

Isn't it funny the way you can take a thing which you naturally think of as a reason, and make a cause of it?

Here's an example. Just as you are dropping off to sleep you always think of queer irrelevant things. Well, turn that process around and when you can't go off to sleep, try to make yourself think of queer, irrelevant, vague things (instead of planning the cleaning you are going to do to-morrow, or what you are going to say to your boss when you ask for that raise) and by and by your mind will begin to get "really fuzzy" and you will drift off into the land of nod on a cloud of foolish fancies.

Again, everyone knows how result becomes cause, and cause leads to result again, when you get to feeling tired and inefficient and let your work go at odds and ends.

When The House Gets Sloppy.

Say you are a housekeeper, and let your house get into a sloppy state because you feel sloppy yourself. Presently, that sloppiness begins to get back at you and make you feel more sloppy and inefficient than ever. The only way to get out of the vicious circle is to strike hard at some point in it and break it. Fly at your house and bring it back to order, and presently you yourself will begin to feel more capable and in command of the situation.

Or suppose that you are an office worker and, because you aren't feeling up to the mark you have let your desk get piled up with papers. The very sight of those disorderly papers reacts to make you still more inefficient, and that results in more papers—until, like the housewife, you take things in hand and determinedly break the vicious circle.

Are We Happy Because We Smile?

One of the modern writers of psychology makes the startling assertion that we don't smile because we are happy, but are happy because we smile; and, vice versa, we don't cry because we are sad, but are sad because we cry.

I must say I don't believe this. Except just this far—if you will make yourself smile when you don't feel like it, and keep it up, the reflexes of that familiar act will help reproduce some of the good cheer you lack. Likewise, if you try to control your voice and keep it even and pleasant when you don't feel a bit even and pleasant, you will begin to gain some of the strength of the temptation you have resisted. And so on down the line.

You can sneer at this sort of "new thought" if you will, or you can carry it to reductio ad absurdum. But, just the same, there is in it a certain undeniable truth, and the wise and open-minded person uses that truth just as he uses all truth.

Fashions and Fads.

Autumn colors are dull.
Suit coats are rather long.
Side panniers are quite full.
Ribbon sashes are two faced.
Fur scarfs are broad and straight.
The crushed girdle is popular.
Many frocks show the girdle flat.
The kimono bodice is a new fancy.
The graceful picture hat is severe in style.

Most of the new hats have soft crowns.
Nasturtium is a shade much in demand.
The long overtunic is a favorite of fashion.

EATING.

I have just come back from dinner, and I ate an hour or so; and that dinner was a winner, taking it as dinners go.

First there was a roast of mutton and I chewed away with zest, till there wasn't left a button on the north side of my vest. There were beets and sweet potatoes, and some prune juice, extra dry, macaroni with tomatoes, and I finished up with pie. Now I have the indigestion, and my works fierce ructions raise, and with me it is a question whether eating truly pays. If we just would cut out eating we could save a lot of rocks, salt them down and keep repeating, in the safe deposit box. We would prosper like the dickens, put all kinds of wealth away, if we'd cut out real and chickens and be satisfied with hay. But so few of us are able to accumulate a bone! On the ample dinner table all our revenue is thrown. Then our innards get to balking, underneath the victuals' gift, and the doctor comes a-docking, and he takes what coin is left. Oh, the druggists round me frolic, pouring nostrums into me, for I have spasmodic colic, and I am a sight to see. So it scarcely is surprising that a pain-tormented dub feels so much like moralizing on the vanity of grub.

AMERICA.

Oh, there is no better country than the one that I'm adoring.
With the Starry Flag of Freedom tossing brightly in the sky,
With its shore lines eastwards, westwards, where the ocean waves are roaring
And a thousand brooks and rivers singing songs as they go by.

Oh, the world is ridged with mountains, but the giants of the west land,
That are kissed by clouds o' morning and brushed by clouds o' night.

Are the guardians of our freedom in the land that is the best land
And they shield us in our laughter and our hours of real delight.

Oh, God's children world-wide over walk and romp in sunny places,
But it's here their hearts are lightest and it's here their dreams come true;
It is here they live their childhood with no sadness in their faces
And it's here they live as children with no bitter tasks to do.

There are men in foreign countries, men of strength and men of splendor,
But it's here the men of Freedom march united in a throng;
It is here that men fight hardest for the sacred things and tender,
And it's here they come to evening to the lifting of a song.

Oh, there is no better country than the land of my devotion.
It is here I want to linger, and it's here I want to die;
Let me sleep here through the ages—I shall hear the surging ocean
And the laughter of the children as they all go trooping by.
