THE LATE MRS. POOL.
Born in Ekfrid Township and Shared the Trials of the Early Pioneers.

In the death of Mrs. Elinor Pool, which event took place at the residence of her son, James, in Glencoe, about the hour of nine o'clock on the morning of December 19th, 1894, another of the early settlers of South Ekfrid passed away to her long last resting place. The deceased was the third daughter of Christopher and Jane Cornhill, who died in 1883 and 1889, respectively, and was born near Melbourne, in the above named township of Ekfrid, in June, 1833, and was therefore in her 61st year at the time of her death.

Both she and her mother in their youthful days were said to have been remarkably good horse-women, and on one occasion when the mother was travelling on horseback holding the daughter, a mere infant, in her arms the horse took fright and ran away, whereupon the mother leaped from the saddle and alighted upon her feet, still holding the infant in her arms.

The Cornhill family was originally of German extraction, and came from the Palatinate of the Rhine to Ireland in the early part of the 17th century to escape persecution for religious reasons, and settled in the county of Limerick, "on the green banks of the Shannon," whence the father of the subject of our present sketch emigrated to Canada and settled on the old homestead in Ekfrid, in 1823, on the Longwoods Road, then a mere pathway through the terrible solitude of the wilderness, broken only at nights by the howling of the wolves or the screeching of the owls, and in the day by the appearance of roaming bands of Indians or the noise of trees falling beneath the axe of the industrious pioneer. She remembered distinctly of having been hidden for several days in the woods, along with her mother and sisters, to escape the rough treatment usually meted out to the unprotected by the marauders known as the "American Sympathizers" while her father went to the front to fight in the interests of law and order, believing that the wrongs of the brave though misguided Canadian patriots should have been redressed by constitutional means and not by those of arms.

Deceased was married in February, 1854, at St. Thomas, Ont., to Christopher Pool, and then went to live down by the Canadian River (then known then bearing a very different appearance from what it does now) where she spent the remainder of her days and where were born to her seven children—five sons and two daughters—all of whom survive and her husband dying in 1889. She retained her faculties to the last, giving even minute directions as to the conduct of her funeral, and although death came upon her rather unexpectedly yet it didn't find her unprepared. She expired very peacefully, passing from this life to receive the reward of her works where sorrows and partings are forever unknown and where the weary are at rest.

Mrs. Pool was from the commencement a member and supporter of the Presbyterian Church at Tait's Corners, and with all her family took an active interest in its affairs up to the time of her death.

Following is the programme for the second of a series of medal contests under the auspices of the R. T. of T. to be held in the Thomson Hall this (Thursday) evening:—
