Gold Storage on the Farm.

How Produce and Berries May Be Kept Fresh a Long Time.

Border That Should Interest Canadlars.

Some interesting articles on the above subject have lately appeared in United States agricultural journals, and farmers across the lines are beginning to turn their attention to the matter. Canada should not be lagging behind in enything pertaining to the march of progress and improvement, so it may not be amiss to give the readers of the Witness an inkling of what is going on in this direction. Cold storage is a mode of keeping cheese, butter, small fruits and other perishable products, which is already being extenrively practiced in cities, and has made a great revolution in the produce trade. Formerly when these goods arrived in the market in hot summer months, they had to be rushed off at any prices that could be got for them in order to place them in the consumer's hands before they spoiled. Sometimes, when large quantities of these products were offered for sale, they had to be sacrificed at prices which would hardly pay transportation rates. Then, again, there would be a scarcity of such articles and prices would be-come extravagantly high. The markets were very uncertain, and it was quite a risk to produce articles of a perishable nature. They might or they might not pay the cost of production. If they happened to reach market when there was a keen demand for such things, high prices would be realized for them. But, not infrequently, whole carloads of goods were lost through lack of demand, and both producers and middlemen sustained great loss. There was loss also to the general community, because it is production that makes national wealth, But now, wherever the cold storage system is in operation, all such loss is prevented, while the price of perishable roods is regulated so that quotations do not fluctuate to any great extent from week to week. It is no longer an experiment, but a well-tested method of management. Enormous warehouses have been erected where butter is frozen hard as soon as it arrives in market. It can be kept in this condition all summer without any loss of flavor or deterioration of quality. If the demand is low when it arrives, there is no imperative reason why it should be sold immediately. It can be kept, at comparatively small expense, until prices improve. June grass butter is frequently kept frozen in storage houses until the middle of winter, when fancy prices are cheerfully paid for an article that has a distinctively grass flavor. The same is true of cheese when the sweetest and richest juices are in the green forage, and the pastures are at their best. In the same way, small fruits are kept in their freshness and remain so for many days after picking in the heat of summer. In short, the storage system, wherever It is in operation, is a decided gain to the producer, and is at the same of warehouses.

source of profit to the owners Advanced farmers in the United States are beginning to think that this rold storage system ought to be utilized by them, both individually and collectively. When June grass butter he bought in the open market at low prices, the speculators who store it are the ones who make the profit out of it. When poultry is abundant and cheap, these same speculators buy up the best specimens and freeze them. Later, they put them on the market when prices are at their best. The farmer is not benefited by this arrangement, except that there are no perishable articles lost, and that there is a more uniform quotation of prices. But the golden harvest is reaped by the speculator instead of the producer. With cold storage on the farm, the dairyman, roultry keeper and fruit grower could watch the market, note the rise and fall of prices, hold on to their goods during dull times, and self when the demand was briskest, and the price at its best. Thus the lion's share of the profits would go into the hands of the producers rather than those of the speculators, and more even-handed justice would be dealt out all round. Farmers have all the facilities for cold storage ready to hand. Ice, buildings, land and everything requisite, is much theaper in the country than in the city. A farm of any pretensions is not completely equipped without an ice-house, and it could be easily constructed so as to provide cold storage on a small scale. Many years ago, some plans appeared in the Illustrated Register of Rural Affairs, combining an ice-house and milk-house. A modification of these would be well suited for the purposes of cold storage on farm premises, and need not be very expensive. But the same arrangements which have been carried out so effectively for cooperative dairying could be just as well applied to co-operative cold storage. One large ice-house can be built much cheaper than several small ones, and the building once erected the cost or filling it in winter would be but trifling. If a number of farmers would combine together, the cost to each would be comparatively little. Then, year by year, the ice-house could be filled at practically no cost whatever, except that of time and labor, which the farmer can easily furnish in the season of winter. This appears to be the best way to develop the cold storage system in the rural districts. It will surely not be long before co-operative cold storage takes its place beside cheese factories and creameries. The value of cold storage for the preservation of fresh fruits is very great. Small fruits are generally picked from a hot field and kept over-night in crates where the air is close and warm, to be ship-ped to market next day. As a result, they are liable to deteriorate at once, so that they are often soft and spongy looking when they come to be opened out for sale. If these small fruits could be picked one day and put as fast as they are gathered into a cold storage the chill they would get there would stop all tendency to decay, keep them firm, and enable the seller to place them on the market in an attractive condition. Berries that by the ordinary method of marketing would rank as second-rate and inferior fruit, would by reason of their firmness and generally excellent appearance be classed as a fancy article, and as such bring the top price. It is very important to bear in mind that quality and appearance always dominate the market in every class of products. In the preservation of winter fruits, cold storage at the proper temperature somewhat above the freezing point, is very helpful in prolonging the season of apples, grapes and pears. Kept too warm, these fruits decay rapidly, pears especially. By means of cold storage, Seckel and other favorite pears are kept in prime condition until spring, when they readily sell in the large cities for $5 and $6 per box. With proper storage facilities, farmers and fruit growers could keep their choicer specimens at home, and drop them in on the market at a time of scarcity and high prices. This is one of the lines along which a shrewd business policy will have a tendency to increase the wealth and prosperity of the rural population. --Jindenbank, in the Montreal Witness.

A FAMOUS CHIEF.

Visit of a Great African King to Queen Victoria.

R cent Improvements Effected Over the The Potentate Who Helped to Overth: ow I obengula.

> Khama, chief of the Bamangwata Bechuanas, is now in London, and has made a favorable impression on the public of the British capital. He is evidently a man of intelligence and a native ruler of exceptional ability. Theodore Bent, the distinguished archaeologist, who regards Khama as one of the most remarkable men of his time, has written as follows of him: "Perhaps he may be said to be the only negro living whose biography would repay the writing. I candidly admit that I advanced toward Palapye fully prepared to find the chief of the Bamangwata a rascal and a hypocrite, and that I left his capital, after a week's stay there, one of his most fervent admirers." A floating newspaper paragraph describes him as "a great It is true that he organized his people into nine regiments of about 800 men each, equipped them with breech-loading rifles, and enforced strict discipline among them, and that he assisted the British to conquer Lobengula, the ancient enemy of his race, but his career as a fighter is the least of his claims to fame. He is a civilized ruler, and has civilized his subjects. Khama was converted to Christianity in part by the example of a native Christian, and in part by Dr. Moffat, the father-in-law and predecessor of Livingstone. He went into exile rather than take a second wife at the command of his father. At the death of his father, Sekhame, Khama returned and became ruler of the tribe, among whom he abolished human sacrifices and witchcraft, and established trials by jury and introduced European tools and such European customs as deserved introduction. He even abolished the use of intoxicating drinks, and he once wrote: "I dread the white man's drink more than all the assegais of the Matabele." He has regulated the price at which goats and milk are sold to travelers, and nobody dare ask more while loaded wagons may be left standing on the road with no fear that anything will be stolen from them. Some years ago Khama moved his whole people, some 15,000 or 20,000 people, a distance of 70 miles to a spot where there was an ample supply of water and famine need not be feared. He gave the word one morning, and in two months the people were all established in their new homes without a murmur or dispute among them. They have gardens, workshops, stores, school-houses and a telegraph office. The women work in the gardens, but the men do the plowing and labor in the shops. Khama's town is the wonder of all visitors. Mrs. Knight-Bruce describes him as a radical reformer, who yet develops both himself and his people on the natural lines of the race; he has made himself into a character that can be spoken of as a "perfect English gentleman," but without losing for a moment his self-respect as an African; he has kept his position as a disciple, not a mimic, of white civilizaton, and Bamangwata Bechuanas is known, even to the map-makers, as Khama's country, the inhabitants are called Khama's people, the capital, Palapye, is Khama's town.

GOING TO THE COUNTRY. The Manitoba Government Preparing for a Popular Appeal.

Winnipeg, Sept. 28. - Discussing the rumored general elections in Manitoba, the Tribune, recognized as Mr. Greenway's organ, says in denial: "The Government has never felt that it needed an opinion from the Province on its school policy. OYSTER FARMING IN CANADA. Starting a Large Establishment in Canadian Waters.

Quebec, Sept. 30 .- One of the largest oyster farms in the world is being established at Carleton, in the Baie des Chaleures, by a newly-formed Quebec company. The bay contains 470 acres, or sufficient to permit of the breeding and fattening of 20, 000,000 oysters a year. The use of the bay at Carleton has been accorded to the company by the Government, and at its mouth a dam containing a number of sluice gates is being erected. The Canadian salt oyster known as Malpecques are now greatly in demand, not only in Canada but also in England and the United States. The utter lack of protection for the oyster fisheries has resulted in a great diminution in the yield and a large increase in the price of these succulent bivalves. A rapid increase in the number of these Canadian oyster forms is lookel for. In the pioneer company there are a number of American shareholders. The capital is all subscribed.

WESTERN DAIRYMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

(Notes by the Secretary.)

The directors met in Toronto during the Industrial Fair. Representatives from the Parry Sound district addressed the board, with a view to securing the co-operation of the association in furthering the interests of dairying in that section. Arrangements will be made to have one afternoon's session and an extra morning's session of the annual convention, when held at Woodstock on Jan. 7. 8 and 9, devoted exclusively to discussion on practical cheesemaking. Papers will be prepared and read by several of the cheese-makers in Western Ontario. Theodore Louis, of Wisconsin, one of the highest anthorities on divine husbandry in America, will be present at the coming convention, and also John Gould, the well-known Ohio dairy farmer. The prize lists for the joint fat stock and dairy show at Guelph, on Dec. 10, 11 and 12, are now ready for distribution. Copies can be had on application to the secretary, Henry Wade, Toronto, or to J. W. Wheaton, secretary, D. A. W. O., London. Prizes to the value of $210 will be given for dairy cows. There will be classes for the various pure breeds, and one for grades. Judging will be done by points, based upon the quantity and quality of the milk given by each cow. The morning's and evening's milk of Dec. I will be tested. The entrance fee for dairy cows will be $1 each. Entries

Good accommodation for dairy stock will be provided, and it is hoped that breeders of dairy stock will make numerous exhibits. This will be the nucleus for a winter dairy show if sufficient interest is shown in this first attempt.

A joint meeting, under the auspices of the Sheep and Swine Breeders and the Western Dairymen's Association will be held on one of the evenings during the show, when addresses of interest to the members of these organizations will be given by practical

ESCAPED IN THEIR NIGHT CLOTHES Serious Hotel Fire at Comber-Blaze in Brampton.

Comber, Ont., Sept. 30.—The Commercial Hotel, a large brick structure, and two general stores, owned and occupied by Messrs. A. M. Aubin and A. Dupuis, were destroyed by fire Saturday night. The fire caught in the barn of the hotel. Two horses were cremated. Nothing but wearing apparel was saved at the hotel, the inmates escaping in their night attire. From the general stores very little was saved, as the heat was intense and Comber has no system of fire protection. The citizens were unable to cope with the flames. The northern part of the village was at one time in imminent danger, and the Michigan Central Railway sent a special from Windsor conveying a staff of men to look after their property. The loss to buildings and stock will amount to fully $6,000. The fire is a severe blow to the village. It has been very unfor unate of late years in this respect.

Brampton, Ont., Sept. 30.—On Saturday Mr. Odlum's dwelling and barns on Vodden street were entirely consumed, together with most of the contents. Two horses and a cow were burned. Loss about $2,000; wholly covered by insurance in the Norwich.

CORBETT IN BAD SHAPE. Suffering From Melancholia-Pale and Nervous.

Buffalo, Sept. 28.-The Times this afternoon says: "From a gentleman who is close to Corbett, the Times learns that the champion is suffering from melancholia, which is gradually become ing more pronounced. That Jim Corbett is not so good as he was a year ago was patent to everyone who saw him on his recent visit to Buffalo. He was sallow, pale, nervous, and, in fact, exhibited many of those horrifying symptoms so graphically portrayed in the average patent medicine "ad." He was sunken-eyed, hollow-cheeked, and appeared to be at a high state of nervous tension. fident that nine-tenths of the citizens of Since then, from all accounts, he has Manitaba heartily indorse the policy which not improved. In fact, he has gone back, as he injured his knee in a bicycle race, and has been rendered worse by it. Again, Corbett's manner of life, from all accounts, is not what moralists would advise.

We have no hesitation in saying that Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is without doubt the best medicine ever introduced for dysentery, diarrhea, cholera and all summer complaints, sea sickness, etc. It promptly gives relief, and never fails to effect a positive cure. DERMATCLOCY.

An Art for Which There Should be Little Use.

Why Not Have a Better Understanding With Yourself as to What Makes Your Skin Sallow and Blotchy.

The treatment of diseases of the skin has been much studied by scientific men. Soaps, lotions, cosmetics, etc., without number have beeen heralded all over the country for years. It is a fact that nearly all diseases of the complexion are directly caused by some stoppage of nature's drains. All the local treatment in the world cannot permanently cure these annoying complaints. The bowels, nature's drainage system, must be kept free from clogging or disease results.

Especially is this true with women. It is almost past belief to what extent female troubles are directly traceable to constipation of the bowels. The researches of an eminent physician led him to believe that much scientific treatment, with a view to regulating the bowels, was erroneous. He demonstrated that the simple remedies of nature used in as nearly a natural state as possible, were most efficient. These researches led to the production of Karl's Clover Root Tea, the greatest regulator of bowel disorders known to man. Its wonderful efficacy has amazed all who have used it.

Mr. Louis Goetz, of Buffalo, N. Y., President Cleveland's old caterer, says of this wonderful remedy: "I have taken Karl's Clover Root Tea every evening before going to bed, with great results. My skin looks better and the pimples are disappearing. Have been troubled for years with erup-tions on the skin, and all remedies so far have failed to help me. A few doses of Karl's Clover Root Tea worked wonders."

A proper use of this sterling remedy will insure bright, clear skin, healthy color and freedom from headache, dizziness, indigestion, and all kindred ills.
It can and does cure all forms of disease resulting from a clogging of the system. This natural remedy, brewed directly from roots and herbs, strikes directly to the seat of the trouble, and is a boon to mankind.

Do not suppose that you are a sufferer from some high sounding organic complaint. Look to your bowels. Keep them free and don't worry. Get a sample of Karl's Clover Root Tea at W. T. Strong's.
