THE SPANISH SENATE.

Revelations Made Regarding the Philippines.

Madrid, June 13 .- At the sitting of crowded. Gen. Rivera, former governor-general of the Philippine Islands, made a long defense of his administration in the Philippines. He said that in 1881 he asked that a powerful squadron be sent to the Philippines, and that the other defenses of the island be increased. He later, during the critical relations with the United States, informed his government that an American squadron was about to appear at Manila, and again asked for several ironclads and other vessels. The government wired on May 12, 1897, that he need not fear a war with the United States, and he could return to Spain, but on March 12, 1898, he received another telegram announcing that war was probable with the United States and Spain, and instructing him to prepare for the defense of the Philippines. "But," said the speaker, "what means of defense had I when everything I had requested since 1881 had been refused? I know I ought not to divulge these matters, in the interest of Spain.'

At this point a senator cried, "The moment has come to say all. Gen. Rivera, continuing, declared that the Spanish squadron in the that a thousand persons were Philippines, owing to a lack of means of defense, was foredoomed to perish. After declaring that a native army in habitants of Free Town, most of them the Philippines was absolutely necest traders, are known to have been masthe climate and the attendant diseases, he spoke of the agreement with the rebels, by which the chief, Aguinaldo, undertook to submit, if the government would give a certain sum to the widows and orphans of insurgents. A tenth part of this sum was given to Aguinaldo, who undertook to distribute it. Gen. Rivera concluded by leclaring that he would give up the cross with which he was decorated if the chamber did not think him worthy

Senor Giron, minister of the colonies, made reply, praising Gen. Rivera's services, and at the same time assuring the chamber that the government was working incessantly to prevent the country's woes from increasing, which was to be feared, Whose Benefactions in Britain Are Known Throughout Many Lands.

The wonderful story of Rev. George Muller's benefactions is well known in many lands-his expenditure of over seven million dollars, received with out any application by him for aid except that made in prayer to his Creator. Less well known is the story of Muller's youth, and of the gross immoralities that preceded his conversion. Mr. Stead, in the Review of Reviews, London, tells of Muller's boyhood and of his reformation in the following words:

"If ever there was a youth who seemed predestined to end his days in a conrict prison, George Muller was that lad. He seemed to be a born thief. He went astray, if not from the cradle, He speaking lies and stealing money, at least from the days when he put on petticoats and wore breeches. rimself tells us, with characteristic frankness, in the very first page of his delightful autobiography, which 4s far more interesting even than Buny-an's 'Grace Abounding for the Chief of Sinners,' that he was an habitual thief before he was ten years old. And, mark you, this was none of the petty larceny of the orchard or the cupboard it was deliberate, systematic stealing of money. He began by falsifying the little accounts he had to render to his father as to the way in which he spent his pocket money; he went on to rob his father of the money he collect-ed as taxes. 'Before I was ten years old, I repeatedly took of the government money which was entrusted to my father, and which he had to make He was detected at last, being caught with the stolen money under his foot in his shoe; but although he was soundly flogged, the only lesson he learned from his teating was not to be such a fool as to be found out next time.

"John Bunyan, poor soul, in the excessive tenderness of his Puritan con-science, accused himself of being the. chief of sinners on account of his love for bell-ringing, the playing at bowls, and a perverse habit of profanity. Compared with the fad George Muller, John Bunyan in his worst estate was a perfect saint. On the day his mother died. George, being then 14 years old, "eventual triumph of justice." And sat playing at cards till 2 o'clock on that is what Uncle Sam pins his faith Sunday morning; and while she lay unon. dead in the house, he spent Sunday in the tavern, and scandalized the little No t

After he came of this programme, opponents of so-cial democrats should be supported."

The fact that a bill has been pre-pared to curtail the franchise in or-der to prevent an increase in the num-signed by his father for the Christian ministry, chiefly, it would appear, in order that when he retired from the excise he might find a comfortable retreat in his son's parsonage. Not even a thirteen weeks' illness produced any impression on him, beyond leading him to read Klopstock's works without weariness. When he recovered he went on his swindling way, narrowly escaping a much more serious imprisonment for a barefaced fraud. When he was twenty his debauchery again laid him up on a sick bed. When he recovered he forged his father's name, pawned his books, and set off on a tour in the senate Saturday the chamber was Switzerland with some fellow-students as rackety as himself. How utterly lost he was at this time to even the rudi-mentary sentiments of honor and honesty may be judged from this confession: 'I was in this journey like Judas, for having the common purse I was a thief. I managed so that the journey cost me but two-thirds of what it cost my friends.'

"Such was George Muller when, in the year 1825, he was studying at the University of Halle, one among nine hundred young men who, as divinity students, were all permitted to preach, although, as he remarked afterward, 'I had reason to believe not nine of them feared the Lord.' If they, the other eight hundred and ninety, were like George Muller this judgment is probably not uncharitable. he had no Bible and had not read it for years. 'I had never heard the he was ill at ease, and when in November. 1825, a comrade told him of a Saturday evening meeting at a friend's house where they read the while suffering from diphtheria, Bible, sang, prayed, and read a printed sermon, 'it was to me as if I had found something after which I had been seeking all my life,—which is pebeen seeking a "Nevertheless, most things are pe-culiar in this odd world, and we must take things as they are. George Muller went to this Saturday evening prayer meeting. At that time in Prussia 'no. regular meetings for expounding the Scriptures were allowed unless an ordained clergyman was present,' so they only read a chapter and a printed sermon. But that night's meeting changed the whole of George Muller's life. How, he frankly confesses, he does n t exactly know. He had never seen anyone on their knees before in prayer. The prayers made a deep impression on him. I was happy, though if I had been asked why I was happy I could not have clearly explained it.' When he returned home he does not remember whether he so much as knelt seems to have had very little sorrow for sin. He certainly had none of John Bunyan's agony of remorse. He says: I obtained joy without any deep sorrow of heart and with scarcely any knowledge. That evening was the turning-point in my life." knowledge.

I asked him in what capacity he was hiring them, and he said a few friends had asked him out of pure friendship to help place men with Mr. Haney, and was doing it without receiving remuneration. He said he was doing it after office hours. As a point of fact, he was doing just what one of us might do at that time." The minister said that Mr. Charleson was away, but when he returned he would be called upon to account for what he had done, and if he was not in a position to give a satisfactory explanation he would have to take the consequences. Mr. Tarte reminded the house that the government had provided, when making the contract, that Canadian labor only should be employed and it was not anticipated that Canadian workmen would be treated like dogs.
