Londoners Glory In Splendid Feat of Canadian Trio

Field Artillery Men Who Recaptured Guns From Germans Performed Valorous Deed.

Londoners glory in the splendid, valorous feat of the three members of the 3rd Ontario Artillery Brigade, who in the recent battle at Langemarck recaptured four guns which had been taken by the Germans following a stubborn falling back of Canadians after gas bombs had been hurled into their midst by brutal vassals of the Kaiser. Hospital Driver Alfred J. Wheeler of that brigade, tells the story of the recapture of the guns without any unnecessary detail, stating bare facts which, though barren enough in the reading, must have been glorious to wintess. The 6th Field Battery, under command of Major Leonard, forms a unit of the 3rd Brigade, and it is quite probable that the other two men mentioned as taking such to allied lines of the ordnance, may have come from here. That they are from Western Ontario may be almost assured.

"There were three of us," says commencing his short description of the feat. Imagine! A trie of plucky Canadians unflinchingly breasting that hail shot and shrapnel with hearts staunch and courage unfaltering. The will was there and the action 'Our officers said to us, 'Well, boys, do you see those guns?

you like you can try to get them." No bullying command that. Just a plain statement of facts and a hidden query quietly spoken. 'Two large ditches and a field of grain lay between us and them. The German fire was pouring around. WE GALLOPED OFF.

We were tickled to death at a chance of getting through.' And they got through. leaped on their horses, confident, They were unafraid of death. Bah! What was death to the glory of accomplishment? horses would take excitement from the riders. Picture that dash, Imagine the animals leaping ditches and mowing down grain, as the mad rush for the pieces of artillery was made. The first gun is reached. Amid that hellish rain of bullets bursting steel it is brought back to Canadian lines.

There are other pieces, however, that must be gotten also. Now the frenzy of battle has taken complete hold on the gallant trio. The moment the first gun is safely inside its own lines again animals are wheeled about and are off for another. A new horse is requisitioned, for one was killed in the first dash. Another gun is reached and safely returned, and another, and another.

"A shell killed Johnston (one the other two men), and killed the horse of the lead team. I thrown from my horse, and the gun wheels passed over my wounded arm, smashing it. Brown (the third man of the party), was badly wounded, and is in a hospital in France today. I am going to get better, and hurry back to the front again. No boasting. Not even a hint given that the deed done was out-side the ordinary. No complaint uttered that fate had been scurvy in causing death and serious injuries. Just a sincere wish to get well. To get well, so "I can hurry back to the front again." neroism. One such deed is enough to make Canadians hold their heads high now and forever. Historians who later write of this horrible war will make much of such outstanding deeds of valor, and Canada, if never before, will stand high in every clime as a nation which breeds men of brawn, bone and muscle, and of men who think their lives well spent if only they
