Agrees With Ned Hanlan Editor World: Some days ago I read a sensible letter in your paper from Mr. an re the condition of the bottom of the lake surrounding the intake pipe of the water supply to the city. His theory was that the powerful suction to the pipe was the means of attracting loose matters, suspended mud and so forth, which deposited in large quantities in the vicinity of the pipe, and he suggested a very simple proof of having a diver examine the bottom. Now I hope this proceeding will be carried out and if necessary a remedy such as he suggests at once be attended to. The water supply as delivered in our houses is not safe to drink. The other day I examined a two-gallon pail of it and the deposit, after a night's standing, almost covered the bottom of the pail and it wasn't sand in this instance but dirt and no doubt came from the lake. I find this dirty state of the water always in stormy or wet weather such as 'would disturb the lake. The importance of a pure water supply to our city would be of infinite benefit. A grown-up son of mine never drinks the water here unless cooked by boiling, and I know there are numbers who act and think as he does in the matter, which no doubt is a great temptation to that the powerful suction to the pipe was who act and think as he does in the matter, which no doubt is a great temptation to use beer or other stimulants. I happened to visit a sickly friend the other day, and he remarked how much he would relish a glass of good water. I suggested Apollinaris, and he compromised by taking a cheaper substitute. The necessity drove him to it, his inclination being for pure water. Many years ago I was employed in a chemist's store in New York. I had filled similar sits in a few towns in England as well as in Montreal and Toronto, and I was very much surprised to find that the water supply to New York was so pure that nitrate of silver (caustic) in solution with the water was perfectly clear, whilst the same in any other place I had ever lived in was murky-deposited, and we were always obliged to use distilled waters. So much in favor of the Croton water of New York. When in Brantford this summer I looked into their water works, and found that they bought so much land at the outskirts of the city that they sank two large main pipes some 20 feet below the surface, these pipes being perforated with small holes when laid quite a number of hundred yards from the main well and collected a sufficient supply for the city, and the water was cold, bright and free from any surface matter. The well and collected a sufficient supply for the city, and the water was cold, bright and free from any surface matter. The people are highly pleased with it. Now it does appear to me that we could earry out the Brantford plan, unless, as I fear, our outskirts being so much of sand it wouldn't be advisable to rely upon its porous nature. I should like to see several letters appear in your paper on this pure water supply, that we are all interested in. Probably some medical gentleman may tell us how free Brantford has been from serious diseases since their new

These lines were often to be found pasted in English histories, as they answered the pur-English histories, as they answered the purpose of many similar rhymes, such as "Thirty days hath September," etc., by enabling students and others readily to recall the order of the English succession. I have long since forgotten them for want of use, and would like to get them accurately for the benefit of some shavers of my own now soudying history.

Children's Car Tickets. Editor World: If the City Engineer is riously desirous to recover from the Street Railway Company the sum of $10,000 for failure to have children's tickets for sale on the cars, let him do as our friend Mr. Whit temore very cleverly did, that is, send out men or lads with orders to apply for tickets on the cars and to take down the tickets on the cars and to take down to the mumbers of the cars where they cannot be had. This would be evidence indeed; surely no man in his senses would depend arrely no man in his senses while departies, not as the Engineer asks the public for a Friday my little girl could not get kets on a Church-street car, but after s she will take down numbers, as no renience often results.

The Fifteen-Cent Mylaw.

Editor World: I note that the City Engioneer advertises his readiness to receive complaints as to the violation of the Fleming 15-cent bylaw on the part of the street railway company.

Not long ago, in conversation with one of our ofty contractors, I asked him his epinion of this bylaw. He replied that it was a matter of very little importance so far as he was personally concerned, but that the direct effect of the bylaw had been to throw out of employment all the poorer class of men, in straitened circumstances, physically unable to earn something if permitted to do so. There is not the slightest doubt but that this stupid bylaw has been the cause of much of the pauperism in the city since it has been in force.

In the interests of laboring men, to many of whom it has been simply a curse instead of a blessing, the sooner it is repealed the better.

TIPS FROM WALL-STREET.

John J. Dixon & Co. received the following despatch over their private wire from Henry Alien & Co. to-day:

New York, Nov. 22.—Stocks have been strong to-day. Nearly all the conspicuous shares have advanced. Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, all out-of-town interests, have been among the buyers. London, too, has picked up a good many stocks. Generally the feeling has been bullish. The Villard stocks have been taken again by the Germans. In the Industrial shares there has been-strength and in some instances buoyancy. It begins to look as if cordage distillers and other Industrial traders might go considerably higher. There is a general feeling that the big dividends of Industrial stocks may lead to not only activity, but material advances. Railway earnings continue good. Money rates do not bulge as predicted. Gold exports are not the scarecrow they were three or four days ago; generally the situation favors the bulls rather than the bears. On reactions, we still think stocks are a purchase. TIPS FROM WALL-STREET.
