Mrs. Almon was one of the few remaining links which connect us with farmer generations. She passed her long tife in consistent communion with the Church of hor routh, and enjoying the affectionate respect of a largo cirele of relatives and felerals. It pleased God to deprive her of sight, for soveral years past, but her mental faculties were unclouded to the last.

Her remains were interred fun beautiful spot, a quiet nook in the Cemetery of the Three Mile Church, embo-somed in "trees which God's right annd had planted," and most appropriate as a place of rest from the labours of this
