

Literary as Well as Musical Perfection Has Been Sought For.

A GEM.

"This new hymn and tune-book is a gem, both as regards its contents and as to its mechanical dress. In this book the choicest pieces of the best modern composers are found, together with a wise selection from familiar tunes and some of the editor's most popular pieces, all happily adapted to all religious uses. The extremely low price of this hymnal will commend it to churches of limited means, and its excellence to all."—The Evangelist, New York.

A SPLENDID HYMNAL.

"One of the finest hymnals of the day . . . it is of convenient size and handsomely printed and bound."—The Daily Saratogian, Saratoga, New York.

ITS AUTHOR WELL FITTED.

"No one could be better fitted to prepare a hymnal that would meet the devotional needs of the people in all services of the church than is the well-known composer, C. C. Converse, of whose hymn, 'What a Friend We Have in Jesus,' fifty million copies have been printed."—Zion's Advocate, Portland, Me.

A Few Appreciative Opinions.

"It's a gem of a hymnal, abounding in gems."

"Its word-parts cover all public and private devotional needs; its music is classic, melodious."

"I wondered how it could contain all those hymns I deem to be *sine qua non*s to a perfect book; yet I found them all in its compact pages."

"It is a marvel of completeness, compactness, attractiveness, handiness, cheapness."

"Go into any church which uses the 'Standard Hymnal,' six months hence, and you will be constrained to exclaim, 'HOW THEY ALL DO SING!'"

"Its small cost enables churches to buy copies enough to place one in the hand of every worshiper."

"It is all I could ask from a hymnal."

"It shows that music may be classic, yet melodious, singable."

"It follows the apostolic plan of enabling the singer to take with him those few precious hymns which everybody likes, and likes to sing."

"Its use promises to be as extensive as that of its editor's 'WHAT A FRIEND.'"

"The publishers' generous concession in its price is a public benefaction worthy of special comment."

"The 'Standard Hymnal' is a sturdy, cloth-bound, comprehensive volume of hymnologic wealth, and costs but 35 cents."

"Those congregations which use it will be conspicuous for their superior singing."

"Its superiority is as marked as that of the diamond."

One Dozen Copies, $3.50; Per Hundred Copies, $25.00.

Special Instalment Terms to Churches and Sunday-schools Quoted on Application.

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY, Publishers, 30 Lafayette Place, New York.