dians, and 700 Indians of different nations. His aid de camp fays, (they being feparately asked) their whole force was about 2000. Several of the priloners fay a. bout 2300. The baron fays, his major general was killed, and his aid-de camp fays, the greater part of their chief officers alfo. : He thinks by the morning and afternoon actions, they have loft near 1000 men; but I can get no regular accounts. Most of our people think from s to 600. We have about 30 prifoners, most of them badly wounded: 'The Indians scalped of their dead already near 70, and were employed after the battle last night, and all this afternoon, in bringing in scalps; and great numbers of French and Indians yet left unscalped. They carried off numbers of their dead, and fecreted them. Our men have fuffered fo much fatigue for three days paft, and are conftantly ftanding upon their arms by day, half the whole upon guard every night, and the reft lay down armed and accoutred, that both officers and men are almost wore out. The enemy may rally, and we judge they have confiderable reinforcements near at hand; fo that I think it necessary. we be upon our guard, and be watchful to maintain the advantages we have gained. For these reasons I do not think it either prudent or lafe to be fending out parties in fearch of the dead.

I do not hear of any officers killed at our camp but colonel Titcomb, and none wounded but myfelt, and major Nichols of colonel Titcomb's. I cannot yet get certain returns of our dead and wounded; but from the beft accounts I can obtain, we have loft about 130 who are killed, about 60 wounded, and feveral miffing from the morning and afternoon's engagement.

I think we may expect very fhortly another and more formidable attack, and that the enemy will then come with artillery. The late colonel Williams had the ground cleared for building a flockaded fort. Our men are fo haraffed, and obliged to be fo conftantly upon watchful duty, that I think it would be both unreafonable, and I fear in vain, to fet them at work upon the defigned fort.
