

employment to which to devote his leisure hours. It has often happened that failure in business has led to success and happiness because the man had another calling, an avocation, on which he was able to fall back. Even to the successful business man there comes a time when he would like to be free of the cares and worries of his calling. What could be pleasanter, as age creeps on, than the feeling that one is able to turn to something else, something that will preserve the bodily and mental powers from falling into too rapid decay?
