WEIGHT

I want to emphasize the fact that all well babies are fat. When baby is born he usually weighs about seven pounds. He loses a few ounces the first few days, and then he starts out in earnest. Each week he gains six ounces, sometimes a little more, sometimes a little less, until he is six months old, when he has doubled his weight at birth. After that he gains more slowly, about four ounces a week, until at a year he has trebled his birthweight. After that he gains about five pounds each year until he is eight or nine years old.

Of course this schedule is not absolute. Even well babies can't keep to a standard all the time. If he falls to gain for a week or two, but is otherwise well, there is no need to worry; he may be cutting teeth, or the weather may be trying. Then, again, some babies gain very rapidly in weight, but not in strength. These are generally fed on prepared infant foods. In these cases the fat is flabby, showing that the food has made fat, but has not built up muscle and energy. These are never strong babies. Sometimes the wrong kind of food causes misshapen heads, or chests, or large wrists. The flesh of the baby must be solid and his muscles firm.

A knowledge of the baby's weight is very important to the young mother. It is a help to her in knowing her progress, and by no other means can one find out how well the little one is getting along. It is not well to weigh baby more than once a week, lest you become unnecessarily worried over slight loss or no gain. Keep a record of the baby's weight and development. It is very helpful in case the child should fall ill, to be able to show the doctor a record of the patient's progress from birth.

The best scales are ordinary grocery scales. Spring scales are not very accurate, and not very safe for baby; but if you cannot get a baby scale, use the spring scale rather than none.

Use the first year weight chart once in two or three months, to enable you to judge the nutrition.

A table showing the average weight, height, circumference of the head and chest for four years is as follows:

At birth, weight 7 1/2 pounds, height 20 1/2 inches, chest 13 1/2 inches, head 14 inches. At one year, weight 21, height 29, chest 18, head 18. At two years, weight 26 1/2, height 32 1/2, chest 19 1/2, head 19. At three years, weight 31, height 35, chest 20 1/2, head 19 1/2. At four years, weight 35, height 38, chest 20 3/4, head 19 3/4.

DON'T LIKE CAR TRACKS.

Recently in the taking of a scene in a Nestor comedy, Eddie Lyons, the popular screen comedian, was supposed to contemplate suicide. He lies down and places his head on the car tracks. Eddie acknowledged to nervousness, and the rest of the company enjoyed his uneasiness.

"It's all right for you fellows standing on the sidewalk," he said, "but supposing the car came a little too far."

"Don't worry," came the response, "you won't derail it."

Two ladies passed and one of them cried out in horror, but was somewhat relieved when her attention was called to the camera.

"They ought not to be allowed to frighten people so," she said.

Eddie made the jump of his life when the word came, and just in time to keep his little place on this earth.

FROM HALIFAX TO VANCOUVER

WOMEN ARE PRAISING DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Nova Scotia Mother Tells How They Cure Her Aching Back and Made Her a Well Woman Again.

ECUM SECUM BRIDGE, Halifax, N.S., April 22.—(Special.)—From Vancouver to Halifax daily reports of the splendid work Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing for the suffering women of Canada, and this little place can show a splendid cure of its own.

Mrs. Orastus Pace, the mother of a large family, was a sufferer from those old, old troubles, backache and headache. Today she is a strong, healthy woman. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it.

"I had a pain in my left side and down to my hips," Mrs. Pace states. "I had headache all the time. My heart was weak, and at times a pain would come to my fears. Some days I was hardly able to walk."

"I read of a number of cures of cases like mine by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and sent for three boxes. Today I am a well woman, and can do as much work as ever I could."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cured Mrs. Pace because her troubles were caused by diseased kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure diseased kidneys, and as they are sold by all druggists, they come from kidney trouble. Dodd's Kidney Pills have come to be known as suffering woman's best friend.

YOUR SUMMER VACATION.

A most interesting and well-printed publication has just been issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System, dealing with the attractions of the well-known Algonquin National Park of Ontario, and copies may be had from any of their ticket offices.

The territory dealt with is a thoroughly universal vacation one, combining high altitude (2000 feet), pure air, unspoiled forest, beautiful lakes, splendid fishing, wild game, hotel or camp life, in close touch with civilization or entirely apart from it, and satisfying alike to novice and veteran.

Included in this publication is a description of the "Nominating Camp," situated on Smoke Lake, the centre of the finest fishing grounds in Canada, and which will be open for the first time this year, with accommodation for 60 people. This idea of a log cabin camp only has become most popular and attractive to a large number of summer playground seekers.

The publication is well written and the map that accompanies same gives one a good idea of the 2,500,000 acres that are found within the park boundaries.

BEST PLAYGROUND RIIS HAS SEEN

BOYS NEED MORE ROOM

Results of Campaign in New York Shown to Large Audience.

Just before taking his train yesterday afternoon, Jacob Riis gave the last of his Toronto talks on playgrounds, and the work they are doing. The speaker was introduced by Miss Elwood, of the Evangelical Settlement, who, adopting the title of Mr. Riis's pamphlet, "A Modern St. George," appealed to the audience, declaring that he was indeed deserving of the name for the great work he had done and was doing in the overturning of social malediction.

"He is the friend of the poor and the prophet of social betterment," was another of the terms used by the speaker, who, however, Mr. Riis said he had come to preach the gospel of playgrounds, and he believed he had come to Toronto at just the right moment, for even since his coming, he had noticed that three boys had been brought before the magistrate for playing on the streets.

To counterbalance this, however, Mr. Riis told his audience that the first playground he had seen in his life, he had seen here, that attached to the Queen Alexandra School. He had known that gracious lady when she was a princess in Denmark, whom he had loved, and it had given him great pleasure to see the beautiful school and playground which bore her name.

The playground movement in New York had grown out of an incident in which some boys playing on the street had broken a window and were being chased by the police. In the heat of the chase, a boy was shot, and Mr. Riis who was at that time reporting the police news, by whose sympathy he had been roused, saw the cause of the children, made the most of the incident. Others joined and the first playground was born.

Unmolested the first playground in New York was the result. Now the city has 22 of these and with their coming, the entire complexion of things is changed for the children and this means for citizenship.

While playgrounds are needed for all, it is for the boy particularly that they are most desirable. A girl can play with her doll for hours in a space three feet square, but a normal boy wants at least an acre of ground. Mr. Riis illustrated the difference brought about by changes in the congested parts of New York, by a number of fine limelight views. The slums thrown on the screen were a revelation in the way of teaching what slumdom really is, and the audience were glad to be able to substantiate Mr. Riis's statement, that we have no slum places in Toronto. One room shown had 13 sleeping inmates, the surroundings being of the most sordid and wretched order. The house commission in New York had found 400,000 of such places, and so hard had they worked that in the last year they had done away with 300,000, and it was hoped that in the next five years the entire remaining 100,000 would be obliterated.

Mr. Riis is very optimistic in his opinion of boys. There are no bad boys born such they are made, is his doctrine. There are different degrees of good boys, and it is circumstances that make them bad. Another theory shown was that of the practical difference of sunlight and air holds in that poverty is the cause of three-fourths of the drunkenness among the poor, and that the better way about, as is often times stated.

The reformation that has been brought about in the slum districts of New York was graphically shown by the pictures of the places before and after. Old rookeries, for example, the notorious Mulberry slum, were seen transmuted into smiling parks, where children, graceful and happy, played and danced in the poetic figures of their native lands across the sea.

In 12 years one and a quarter million boys have formerly lived in darkness and vice, had been moved to new and bright tenements. A lesson was taught all who have yet time to profit by it, when the speaker told of New York giving three and a half million for a block of land for a playground, that might have been bought before for $300,000.

A vote of thanks was given the speaker by Mrs. Plumtree, seconded by Mrs. Warren, and Mrs. Strath, who always give to the address of Mr. Riis, the first apostle of playgrounds on this side of the water.

Well, Uncle Wiggily was riding along and along over the wet meadows and thru the woods with the trees all dripping with rain, when, all of a sudden, a great big black bear jumped out from behind a stump.

"Hold on!" cried the bear, holding up a hairy paw with long claws on it. "Where are you going?"

"I'm riding for my health," said Uncle Wiggily politely.

"Nonsense," cried the bear, coming closer. "No one rides for their health in the rain. Come with me and I can soon fix you."

"Yes, I guess he can fix me!" thought Uncle Wiggily. "He'll scratch all my fur off playing tag with me, that's what he'll do." And he was wondering what he could do to get away, when the bear happened to notice the German bologna sausage trolleys on the auto.

"That's queer!" he exclaimed. "What are those?"

"German sausages," replied Uncle Wiggily.

"Are they good to eat?" asked the bear.

"Germans eat them," answered the rabbit gentleman.

"How lucky that I am a German," growled the bear. "I will eat your sausage trolleys, and then—well, I'll see about you later! Ahem!" and he coughed loudly.

But just as he was going to bite off one of the sausage trolleys, that bear came so near the auto that Uncle Wiggily

Uncle Wiggily, the old gentleman rabbit, walked to the door of the hollow stump where he lived, and looked out.

"Oh, dear!" he exclaimed, as he scratched one long ear with the other, "it's raining. I wonder if Dr. Possum expects me to take my automobile ride in such weather as this?"

"I certainly do," cried a voice on the side porch. "Why shouldn't you go out in the rain? You're not sick, are you?" and Dr. Possum himself came along, blinking and winking at Uncle Wiggily thru the rain drops.

"Of course I'm not sick," said the old gentleman rabbit. "What put such an idea into your head?"

"Never mind that. Nor yet are you sugar," went on the doctor animal.

"Certainly not. The dear Sugar! I should say I'm not sugar! But I like it on my carrots just the same," said Uncle Wiggily.

"Then, if you're not sugar nor salt, you won't melt in the rain," went on Dr. Possum. "I came around specially to see if you would give up your auto riding just because it rained."

"I'm surprised at you," said Uncle Wiggily, "but I'll give up my auto riding just because it rains."

"Oh, I'll go out if you say so," spoke Uncle Wiggily, "but if I get the sniffles, snuffles, but I'll give up my auto riding just because it rains."

"But don't worry. Fresh air, even if it's wet, never gave anyone a cold. Only keep yourself dry, that is all, and you have the places before and after. Old rookeries, for example, the notorious Mulberry slum, were seen transmuted into smiling parks, where children, graceful and happy, played and danced in the poetic figures of their native lands across the sea."

A vote of thanks was given the speaker by Mrs. Plumtree, seconded by Mrs. Warren, and Mrs. Strath, who always give to the address of Mr. Riis, the first apostle of playgrounds on this side of the water.

Well, Uncle Wiggily was riding along and along over the wet meadows and thru the woods with the trees all dripping with rain, when, all of a sudden, a great big black bear jumped out from behind a stump.

"Hold on!" cried the bear, holding up a hairy paw with long claws on it. "Where are you going?"

"Germans eat them," answered the rabbit gentleman.

"How lucky that I am a German," growled the bear. "I will eat your sausage trolleys, and then—well, I'll see about you later! Ahem!" and he coughed loudly.

But just as he was going to bite off one of the sausage trolleys, that bear came so near the auto that Uncle Wiggily horn that went "Moo! Moo!" to tell people to look out. Right in the soft, and tender ribs of the bear Uncle Wiggily tickled him with the cow's horn. Then the bear laughed, and said, "And turns the peppercorn, and he was so startled, that he will kindly allow me to say so, that he could do nothing."

"Quick! Quick! Wiggily, quick!" called a quacking voice behind him. "Start your auto before the bear gets thru laughing, and you'll get away."

And Uncle Wiggily did, and then something flew on the back seat of the auto, and when we was safely away from the bear, Uncle Wiggily looked around and there was Jimmie Wiblewobble, the boy duck.

"Why, how came you here?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"I've been to the drug store to get some medicine that Dr. Possum ordered for my Grandfather Goosey Gander," said the little duck boy. "I was coming along, and I saw the bear bothering you. But when I saw you tickle him I knew you would get right, so I called to you to hurry on, and then I flew in here to have a ride."

"And I am very glad you did," said the rabbit gentleman. "I was wishing for company."

So he and Jimmie Wiblewobble rode on for some time longer, until, all of a sudden, before the old gentleman rabbit knew it, he had run his auto in a big puddle of water. And there the auto stuck in the mud.

"Oh, dear!" cried Uncle Wiggily, "what shall I do? I can't make my auto go, for something is broken, and if I jump out, to wade to land, I'll get all wet and have the sniffles, snuffles, Oh, my!"

"Don't worry," said Jimmie. "Water won't hurt me, you know. I can swim in it and never get wet. I'll swim ashore, get a rope, fasten it to your auto, and then old Dog Percival and I will pull you to dry land. Then you can get out and fix the auto without getting your feet wet."

"Thank you kindly," said Uncle Wiggily. "So Jimmie swam to shore thru the mud puddle and soon had a rope fast to the auto. Then he and old Dog Percival pulled the car out, and Uncle Wiggily soon had it going again. The whole you-may-call-it had come loose, that was all, and it was easily mended."

And so he rode on, and breathed in a lot of fresh air, and felt better when he got safely home that night, and Grandpa Goosey was better also.

And the next story is going to be about Uncle Wiggily and the balloon man, and then old Dog Percival and doesn't kick its legs over the meat box and melt the ice cream.
