LONDON, Sept. 6.—An official statement by the war bureau says that the trials of strength which have taken place between the allies and their enemies which would have considered operations of the first magnitude in other wars, have in this war merely been incidents of the strategic withdrawal and concentration of the allies necessitated by the initial shock received by them in the frontiers by the stupendous onslaught made by the Germans.

Canadian Press Despatch. NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Russian troops to the number of 150,000 have passed thru England and are now at the rear of the German army in France, according to Vance Thompson, an American writer arrived here today on the Red Star liner Kronland, which sailed from Liverpool Aug. 28. On that day Mr. Thompson said he saw detachments of Cossacks on their way to the channel ports, and learned that the British Government had suspended the regular train service in order to give the Russians the right of way.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—The latest casualty list submitted by the war office comprises 4796 men. The two previous lists accounted for 10,355 men killed, wounded and missing, making a total of 15,151. An official list of the British casualties was issued tonight. This was the third list made public, and completes the casualties up to Sept. 1. It was as follows: Killed, 9 officers, 33 men; wounded, 27 officers, 120 men; missing, 49 officers, 4558 men.

Official reports from Petrograd say that although the defeat of the Russians at Tannenberg was regrettable, it is serving only to stimulate the fervor of the people, the army and the government, to multiply their efforts for final success, which the whole nation considers inevitable, as the Germans, in making what was perhaps their most strenuous attempt, disrupted only one-twentieth part of the Russian army.

The British forces have conformed to the general movement of the French armies and have acted in harmony with the strategic conceptions of the French general staff since the battle of Cambrai, August 25. While the British have successfully guarded the left flank of the whole, French has made a steady turning attack supported by enormous forces of the enemy, the seventh French army came into position on our left. This in conjunction with the fifth army on our right greatly relieved the pressure and strain on our men. The fifth French army on August 29 advanced from the line of the Oise River to meet a counter German forward movement.

Despite this success, a general movement south was continued. The Germans persistently assaulted the British troops in this withdrawal and remained practically in continuous contact with our rear guard.

Only Hope Now is in German Force, Which is Rushing Toward Northeastern Frontier—Defeat of Russians at Tannenberg Not Disastrous.

The British troops continued to delay and retard the German advances on Aug. 30 and 31, being frequently engaged, and on Sept. 1 a very vigorous effort on the part of the Kaiser's troops brought about a sharp action in the vicinity of Compiègne. This action was fought principally by the great British cavalry brigade and the Fourth Guards Brigade and was entirely satisfactory to the British.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—The mines laid in the North Sea by the Germans were responsible for another disaster. The steamship Runo of the Wilson Line struck one and was sunk in the sea while on a voyage to Archangel, Russia. She left Hull yesterday with 300 passengers on board, including a number of Russian emigrants. For some time today it was believed that the most of those aboard the ship had been saved, but that a considerable number had perished. This evening the government officially announced that the loss of the Runo had been confirmed and that all had been saved with the exception of about 20 of the Russian emigrants. Most, if not all the rescue work, was carried out by fishing trawlers. The rescued survivors were brought to Hull and Grimsby. Skipper Woollasson of the trawler Cameo stated that at 5.30 yesterday he saw a ship in distress and hurried to her assistance as quickly as possible. He found that the Runo had been greatly damaged by the explosion of the mine, and that no time could be lost. He rescued two boats full of people. A trawler, whose home port is Grimsby, rescued another boatful of the passengers. This last saved many by use of the life line, while members of the crew took others from the water where they were floating. The Runo fouled the mine when about 40 miles off Shields at 4.35 o'clock. The Runo rose in the water and then settled until the forepart of the ship was awash. She remained in this position long enough to enable her small boats and the trawlers to pick up the survivors, 200 of whom were landed at Hull. The American consul at Odessa was aboard the Runo. He was slightly injured about the head. The official report states that of the persons on the steamer 245 were saved and 26 are missing.

Mr. W. D. Dineen, president of the Messrs. W. D. Dineen & Company, one of Canada's largest and best-known fur houses, being asked why he is exhibiting a splendid line of furs for both ladies and men were not in evidence at Canada's National Exhibition, re-plied: "We appreciate the importance of making a display at the Exhibition, but our staff in the factories, warehouses and stores are now too busily engaged manufacturing and filling orders for the fall and winter trade to give the time required to make a display of our products that would be in keeping with our varied and extensive lines."

Canadian Press Despatch. DETROIT, Sept. 5.—Two passengers on a G.T.R. passenger train, inbound from Toronto Saturday night, were shot and seriously wounded by two masked robbers who boarded the train soon after it entered the city. After securing money and valuables from the rest of the passengers in the coach the bandits disappeared. The injured men are Cornelius Bozekerk, of Berlin, Ont., and Joseph Seltzer of Shelby, Ohio. The former was shot thru the stomach and physicians said his recovery was doubtful. After Seltzer had been taken to the hospital it developed that his condition was not as serious as at first indicated, and he is expected to recover.

At our warehouses and store, Yonge and Temperance streets, we have arranged a special display of the very latest designs and styles of all fur garments, so that any intending purchaser will not only get better satisfaction and a larger variety to choose from, but will receive better attention than at a crowded display at the fair.

The robbers entered the parlor car of the train at Milwaukee Junction, within the city limits. Both immediately began firing revolvers, and the passengers were ordered to hold up their hands. One of the robbers reached in a linen closet, grabbed a pillow slip and into this the passengers were instructed to drop their valuables. As one robber collected booty, his companion backed him up with the revolver.
