"Twixt Love and Duty."

"Oh, indeed, all fortune fitted us! We went en masse down Broadway into Wall Street, and so to the City Hall. Here some one, who had a sense of the Sabbath, objected to breaking open the doors because of the day. But with very proper spirit Willet replied, 'If we wait until tomorrow, the King's men will not wait. The arms will be removed as fast as for a key, here is one that will open any lock!' As he said the words, he swung a great axe around his head, and so, with a few blows, he made us an entrance. Indeed, I think he is a grand fellow."

"And you got the arms?"
"Faith! we got all we went for. The arms were already among the people. There was a drum and life also found with them, and some one made us very excellent music to step to. As we returned up Broadway, the congregation was just coming out or 'Tinty. Upon my word, I think we frightened them a little."
"Where were the English soldiers?"
"Indeed, they were shut up in barracks. Some of their officers were in church; others waiting for orders from the governor or mayor. 'Tis to be found out where the governor might be; the mayor was frightened beyond everything, and not capable of giving an order. My Uncle Gordon had been still in command here, he had not been so patient."

"And for you, that would have been a hard case."
"Upon my word, I would not have fought my old comrades; I am glad, then, that they are in Quæbec. Our swords will scarce reach so far."
"And where went you with the arms?"
"To a room in John street. There they were stacked, the names of the men enrolled, and a guard placed over them. Bram is on the night patrol, by his own request. As for me, I have the honor of assisting in the night patrol. My first act of rebellion; and if the military superstition be a true one, 'A Sunday fight is a lucky fight, and now, mother, we will have some dinner; the soldier loves his mess.'"

Every one was watching him with admiration. Never in his uniform had he appeared so like a citizen as he did at that hour in his citizen coat and breeches of wine-colored velvet, his brilliant beauty, her smiles and tears, her shining silk and glaucous jewels, and the lovely subterfuge for many a precious sister, and many a darling lady love. But few words were said. Lysbet and Katherine soon blended the orange folds hung to the winds, and with bright, upturned faces, and a ringing shout of welcome.

Such a lovely day it was!—a perfect June day; doors and windows were wide open; a fresh wind blowing, a hundred blended scents from the garden were in the air; and there was sunshine that warmed everything to the core. In the women, they put their hearts of the women, they put their hearts back with smiles, and hopeful words, the fragrance of the gallant men who were to fight a noble fight under the banner their fingers had fashioned.

mander-in-chief, to direct their operations. Then every heart was in a state of the greatest expectation and excitement. No one remembered at that hour that the little army was without organization or discipline, most of its officers incompetent to command, its troops altogether unused to obey, and in the field without enlistment. Their few pieces of cannon were old and of various sizes, and scarce any one understood their service. There was no siege train and no ordnance stores. There was no military chest and nothing worthy of the name of a commissariat. Yet every one was sure that some bold stroke would be struck, and the war speedily terminated in victory and independence.

So New York was in the buoyant spirits of a young man rejoicing to run a race. The armorer, the saddler, and the smith were busy day and night; weapons were in every hand, the look of apprehended triumph on every face. In June the Van Heemskirk troops were ready to leave for Boston—nearly six hundred young men, full of pure and brave thoughts, and with all their illusions and enthusiasm undimmed.

The day before their departure they escorted Van Heemskirk to his home, Lysbet and Katherine saw them coming, and fell weeping on each other's necks; tears that were both joyful and sorrowful—the expression of mingled love, and patriotism, and grief. His large, fair face was serene and confident, and the bright young lady who followed him looked like his sons, his daughter, and any one might have been sure—even if the roll had not been down, it—that they were Van Brunts, and Van Heemskirk, and Van Rensselaers, Roosevelts, Westervelts, and Tenhuysens.

They had a very handsome uniform, and there had been no uncertainty or dispute about it. Blue, with orange trimmings, carried the question out one dissenting voice. Blue had been for centuries the color of opposition to tyranny. The color of the Covenanters chose it because the Lord ordered the children of Israel to wear a ribbon of blue that they might remember the Lord, and remember all the commandments of the Lord, and do them; and their own eyes, and be holy unto their God (Numbers, xv.). Into their hearts carried their sacred color, and the Dutch Calvinists soon blended the blue of their faith with the orange of their patriotism. Very early in the American struggle blue became the typical color of freedom, and when Van Heemskirk's men chose the blue and orange for their uniform they selected the colors which had already been famous on many a battle-field of Freedom.

Katherine and Lysbet had made the flag of the new regiment—a orange flag, with a cluster of twelve blue stars above the word Liberty. It was Lysbet's hands that made it. They stood in a body around the door of Van Heemskirk's house, and the president of the color-sergeants carried their sacred color, and the Dutch Calvinists soon blended the blue of their faith with the orange of their patriotism. Very early in the American struggle blue became the typical color of freedom, and when Van Heemskirk's men chose the blue and orange for their uniform they selected the colors which had already been famous on many a battle-field of Freedom.

LIFE SAVED.—Mr. James Bryson, Cameron writes: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs, and was given up by physicians. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, stating that his wife had used it for a throat trouble with the best results. Acting on this advice, I procured the medicine and less than half a bottle cured me. I certainly believe it saved my life. It was with reluctance that I consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a state that I doubted the power of any remedy to do me any good."

The Business Outlook Across the Border.

Buyers and Sellers Holding Back Till After the Elections.

New York, Oct. 24.—Bradstreet's weekly review says: General trade continues along conservative lines, buyers and sellers preferring to defer business until after election. Traders are more hopeful as to the outlook for business later in the year and next spring. The reaction in wheat prices, after an advance of 22c, is the natural result of a desire to realize profits, an advance in rates for money and enormously heavy receipts of wheat at primary markets, caused by higher prices. Comparatively small stocks of wheat in importing countries, a decrease in the world's total production of wheat for two years in succession, unexpected shortages in Russia, India, Argentina and Australia, as only an average crop in the United States are interpreted to mean that the price of wheat will advance further.

Total exports of wheat, flour included as wheat, from both coasts of the United States and from Montreal this week are not quite as large as last week or for four preceding weeks, but are heavier than in corresponding weeks in the present year, amounting to 3,823,000 bushels. Mercantile collections continue as difficult to make as in the last week, except in a few of the larger cotton growing States and in the spring wheat region.

The 1896 business failures reported throughout the United States this week, which is 13 more than last week and 23 more than in the corresponding week last year.

IN CANADA. General trade at Toronto is fairly satisfactory, and the outlook is for improvement. Demand for goods from Manitoba and British Columbia.

The export market for lumber, apples from Montreal is active. Manufacturers of wood and clothing at that port are active. The sale of credits one month on sales for spring and fall delivery, 1897.

There is considerable activity in lumber shipments from New Brunswick, where the prospect is for a large lumber cut. Wet weather has interfered with agricultural interests on Prince Edward Island.

Bank clearings at Winnipeg, Hamilton, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax amount to $2,556,000 this week—slightly in excess of the total one week ago, not quite 5 per cent less than the corresponding total last year, but 5 per cent larger than the like total of 1896.

There are 48 business failures reported throughout the Dominion of Canada, two compared with 39 last week, and 35 respectively in each of the corresponding weeks in 1895 and 1896.

New York, Oct. 24.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s report says: The most striking feature of the industrial returns is the number of contracts conditioned upon the election. There already are enough to make business rather lively for a time, and many others are pending, which will probably be held back until Nov. 1.

RAILWAY RUMBLINGS.

Fertile Anniversary of the L. & P. S. R.

Grand Trade Business Increasing. The L. & P. S. R. was formally opened on Oct. 26, 1856. W. Edgar was the first conductor and J. M. Nicholson the engineer. Company Edgar was succeeded by Mr. W. Fraser.

The railways from the seaports to Upper and Central India have reduced their freight rates on grain. This action it is expected will stimulate imports of wheat.

The increase of freight in the Stratford district, G. T. R., for the week ending Oct. 14, is 1,731 tons over the corresponding week of last year. The increase of tonnage in oil cake shipped from Baden, for instance, is 243, and from Clinton and Goderich there was an increase of apples amounting to 701 tons.

East-bound shipments from Chicago last week were 78,306 tons, against 61,023 for the corresponding week of last year. The roads carried tonnage as follows: Michigan Central, 7,397; Wabash, 8,898; Lake Shore, 10,947; Port Wayne, 8,313; Pan-Handle, 8,727; Baltimore and Ohio, 5,935; Grand Trunk, 9,445; Nickel Plate, 4,606; Erie, 9,902; Big Four, 3,583. Total, 78,905.

A Chicago telegram says that some time ago the western roads declined to make a rate of one fare for the round trip for voters who were anxious to get to their homes to vote. The roads in the Central Passenger Association have made this rate, and now the chairman of the Western Passenger Association has authorized the roads in his association to meet the competition of the eastern roads whenever it is necessary.

At Columbus, O., Judge Stevenson Burke has brought suit as president of the Snow Fork and Cleveland Coal Company against the Hocking Coal and Railway Company to recover $35,000, a consideration for lands sold by the Snow Fork Company to the defendant company in 1881. The lands situated in the Hocking Valley comprise 5,819 acres, which were sold for $150 per acre. Of the $842,970 originally due the defendants have paid $399,979. Judge Burke is $5,000,000 suit is still pending in the courts, and the lands involved in the present suit are indirectly involved in the former litigation.

While Riding a Tandem With His Daughter in New York. New York, Oct. 24.—Horace W. Chipman fell dead off a tandem bicycle while riding with his daughter at Fifth avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street Thursday noon. Mr. Chipman was 68 years old. He was the auditor of the New York Transfer Company.

He was an enthusiastic wheelman, and frequently rode with his daughter Edith and his son Frank. They started for a ride yesterday, and passed down Fifth avenue, which is a favorite road with uptown riders.

When in front of St. Andrew's Church Mr. Chipman threw up his hands and fell backward. The daughter, too, was thrown from the wheel.

THE LAY OF THE COUCH

You might build me a palace most stately and grand, The finest that ever an architect planned— With minarets, gables and sky-pointing towers, On a velvet lawn amid fountains and flowers.

You might pave the floor with the richest mosaics its halls, And the costliest tapestries drape on its walls, But for comfort—there's still a delusion and snare, If there should not be found among its furnishings rare A Ferguson & Sons' Oriental Couch.

You may press to my lips pleasure's goblet to drain; I may drink to its dregs, but to find that 'tis vain To quaff such wine, though it be of the best, To solace a heart that is filled with unrest.

You may lure me with fortune, may tempt me with fame; I may yield, but to find that 'tis ever the same— But there's one thing unalloyed, the only and best— If it must be—spare this and take all the rest— A Ferguson & Sons' Oriental Couch.

She was uninjured, and, with her brother, hastened to her father's assistance. He was dead when they reached him.

The daughter became hysterical, and her screams soon brought a large crowd to the place. One of the neighbors ran to the house of Dr. Truax, No. 17 East One Hundred and Twenty-seventh street. When Dr. Truax arrived and examined the body he found death had been caused by a rupture of the heart and had been instantaneous. A few minutes later the ambulance arrived, and Surgeon-Pipke, who was in charge, agreed with Dr. Truax's diagnosis.
