Despite the weather, the attend-ance at the Exhibition yesterday. was good. Rain and wind at noon was good. Rain and wind at noon made many people postpone their trip in the afternoon, but 39,000 people were on the grounds. Last year, a bright fine day, showed an attendance of 44,000, while in 1913 the attendance was 69,000. At that, the figures are only 40,000 behind the record year for the same time, with the biggest days yet to some.

Press day at the Canadian Nations. Exhibition was expected to bring something unusual for Federation Year, and it did-it brought rain. It brought just a little more than enough to lay the dust, and in fact, the wind which accompanied it did more damage than the rain itself. The downpour was severe while it lasted, but it didn't last long, so that everybody had a rollicking good time, and the dampness hindered no one from thoroly enjoying the Exhibition

By the intent look upon the many faces it could be seen that everyone was studying the exhibits in a very determined manner, and thus storing away knowledge which will be called mind in the days to come. So great was the attendance at the directors' luncheon that an overflow "meeting" was held in the government restaurant, but the guests returned to hear the speaking. J. G. At the Luncheon. Mr. Elliott introduced by Col. Marshall, and on behalf of the association thanked the directors for the consideration always shown the press, which greatly appreciated the work of the Canadian National Exhibition, The press, he said, was also aware of the godly and humane work of Col. Marshall in connection with the Red Cross. He complimented the Exhibidirectors on the splendid efforts the publicity agent, Joseph Hay. Mr. Elliott wished to give a message, not of war, but of peace. "in times of war prepare for peace." The Canadian brain was the equal of any other in the world, and if the outlook was to be bright and glorious for the future now was the time for preparation. A high type of education was necessary for this preparation, a type much higher than the present system of both the scientific and technical branches. Educators begin with the young life,

Canada has all the resources that are necessary to become a competitor in the world market, but it must be educated in the service that would be required and the young must be fitted become developers. In agriculture the farmer had been merely "tickling the soil," and had not been giving the land the same scientific treatment that had been accorded that of

and invention

Industrially also, Canada must prepare to meet the needs of the time and training in every department was necessary in order that it might compete vitn the countries of the world. The government should take a broad view of the requirements, and in this connection the press could do a great deal to stimulate the government. Roy E. Sales, of the weekly section of the Canadian Press, spoke of the
