MOVEMENT FOR GOOD WILL AND UNDERSTANDING AMONG ENGLISH-SPEAKING PEOPLES

Secretary of the Sulgrave Institution Appeals to Nova Scotia to Join in Furthering the Efforts for Friendship and Unity.

(Halifax Chronicle.)

There was an unusually large attendance at yesterday's meeting of the Commercial Club at the Green Lantern when Andrew B. Humphrey of New York, secretary and member of the Board of Governors of the American Branch of the Sulgrave Institution, was the speaker. His subject was "Anglo-American Friendship," in which he made an earnest and eloquent plea for co-operation and good-will.

In English-Speaking Hands.

Mr. Humphrey's address was listened to with great attention and interest and he was frequently interrupted by bursts of applause.

We are living, the speaker said, in a chaotic period following the great world war, but with all the world turmoil, it was never more evident than at present that the salvation of the world civilization is largely in the hands of the English-speaking people.

When the last war between Great Britain and the United States closed by the signing of the Treaty of Ghent on Christmas Eve, 1814, it was hoped that would be the last war between English-speaking people, and while that treaty did not settle any of the great issues for which the war was fought it did bring an armistice and during the last century those issues for which the War of 1812 was fought have been settled by conciliation and arbitration.

The prime minister of Canada is now in Washington in conference with the state department's secretary, putting the finishing touches upon Canadian matters for promoting a lasting peace. It will be remembered that the Rush-Baghot Treaty of 1817 provided the first great proposition for international disarmament which has given us an unarmed border line between Canada and the United States of nearly 4,000 miles.

How Movement Started.

In recognition of the 100 years of peace an organization was started in the City of New York in 1908, approved by President Roosevelt for the purpose of commemorating a century of peace between the United States and Great Britain. Mr. John A. Stewart was the prime mover in this movement, and is still the chairman of the board of directors. Preparations were made to celebrate the event throughout the world wherever English-speaking people were located in numbers.

In 1913 Great Britain sent to the United States a delegation headed by Lord Weardale, and this delegation was officially received by President Wilson at the White House, and in many cities between Boston and Chicago. Great Britain's call to the colors on Aug. 3, 1914, to defend her honor and her empire, and the Great War put an end to all thought of celebrating the Treaty of Ghent on Christmas eve, 1914.

The participation in the Great War by the United States emphasized the necessity of the unity and co-operation of the English-speaking peoples not only for self-preservation but for the preservation of the fundamental law and principles upon which the civilization of English-speaking peoples is founded.

Found Their Common Soul.

When the armistice came the English-speaking people throughout the world had found their common soul and realized the forced necessity of a better understanding and a greater co-operation without a political alliance. With this thought in mind, thoughtful men throughout the world suggested the perpetuation of English and American common ideals along educational lines and of a permanent character, purchased the old Sulgrave Manor House which was the ancestral home of George Washington. The Sulgrave Institution was founded as a permanent institution for the purpose of perpetuating friendship and good understanding between the English-speaking people throughout the world, and for co-operation with all other peoples and nations of equal goodwill. Branches of the Sulgrave Institution has headquarters in London, New York, and Ottawa, and it is planned to have branch organizations in all the provinces of Canada, and in all overseas dominions of the British empire; it is also proposed to begin immediately the extension of this good-will circle to France, Belgium, and the other allies, and as rapidly as practical include in the circle as many other nations as may be in sympathy with the generaal plan and scope of this movement.

Canadian Premier's Ideal.

It is of especial interest to Canada to note that almost simultaneously with the organization of this movement in New York the present prime minister of Canada, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, in an address at Harvard in the year 1909 expanded on the idea embodied in the Rush-Baghot Treaty, and advocated a closer understanding, not only between Canada and the United States, but among all English-speaking people. It was in this address that Mr. King advocated the building of a permanent peace memorial bridge at Niagara Falls. Plans for this bridge were actually made years later, and but for the financial stringencies might have been undertaken and built. The discussion of this bridge proposition has had much to do with the undertaking of the actual erection of an international bridge at Buffalo, and also one at Detroit. It is also of interest to note that Prime Minister King is today in Washington in consultation with Mr. Hughes, the American secretary of state, proposing to complete the Rush-Baghot Treaty of 1817 by elliminating the clauses which made that treaty revokable on six months' notice.

What Has Been Done

The Sulgrave Institution has been doing some very definite work since the war; it has placed in Canning Square, opposite Westminster Abbey, in London, St. Gauden's statue of Abraham Lincoln. It has also placed Bernard's statue of Abraham Lincoln in Manchester, where Lincoln during the civil war was so largely supported by the labor organizations. Last year the Sulgrave Manor House in England was dedicated and presented to the Sulgrave Institution, under official auspices. Last year through the Sulgrave institution, a life-size statue of George Washington was placed in Trafalgar Square, London, and a bust of Washington placed in St. Paul's Chapel, London, between the tombs of Wellington and Nelson a similar bust was also presented to the city of Liverpool.

As a reciprocal expression of appreciation, next September, a large British delegation will visit the United States and Canada, and will present to the American people a heroic statue of Edmund Burke, to be placed on Massachusetts avenue in Washington, and received by the President of the United States, who is the honorary chancellor of the Sulgrave Institution. A large bust of William Pitt will be placed in Pittsburgh, after whom this city was named, and officially received by the city. Busts of the late beloved Lord Bryce will be placed, one in Trinity church, New York, and the other in Washington, where Mr. Bryce labored so arduously for years to perpetuate good-will among all nations and peoples.

The Co-operation of Canada

"I am now officially, as an officer of the Sulgrave Institution and member of its board of governors, visiting the Maritime Provinces for the purpose of co-operating with Canadians in building up a Sulgrave organization in the old Dominion. We have headquarters at Ottawa, and this movement has been officially recognized in the past by the Canadian government at Ottawa, and very materially aided. The present government is in full sympathy with the movement, and will co-operate with us in every reasonable manner, but the success of a movement of this kind depends not so much on govrenment, as upon union of and the co-operation of the peoples of the world interested in this movement. This movement is one of, for and by the people in the interest of world peace, to promote good understanding, and justice for all people, the weak as well as the strong.

"We have in the United States a president whose essential key word in every movement is one of peace and good-will for all nations and peoples, and we are equally confident that the sentiment of the British people throughout the world is equally friendly. A unity of the English speaking people everywhere means better days for the world and promise of ultimate peace.

The American and British Sulgrave Institution appeals to the Maritime Provinces to join in this movement, and perfect such organizations as may seem best to them. We leave the matter of organization entirely in your hands, and simply pledge ourselves to co-operation with you for the unity of the English speaking peoples and the betterment of conditions throughout the world for a lasting peace, and a world governed by law and good-will."

WHAT IS SUCCESS?

One man of our acquaintance earns $15,000 a year. Another man we know just as well, earns $8,000.

If you were asked to tell us which is the more successful, the chances are, ten to one, that you would answer, "Why, the one who earns $15,000 a year."

If you made that answer you would be wrong. No man's success can be measured by the size of his income.

It happens that the $15,000 man spends far more than he earns. He is in debt all the time and if his income ceased for any reason he would be dead broke.

The other man who only earns $8,000 a year, not only lives within his income, but carries a life insurance policy for the protection of his family, and as a result of his thrifty habits, has $10,000 scattered around in various savings banks, and one co-operative society.

Perhaps more important than the money this second man has, is the peace of mind that is his. He has played the game of life according to the rules and is conscious of the fact that he has done good work. He enjoys life because his mind is not cluttered up with worries over debts and other negative things.
