The St. Lawrence will be sailed by Vict encountered the hostility of the C. P. R. organization at the polls, in November, 1900. There seemed to have been some surprise over Mr. Blair's great victory in that election, but it was a foregone conclusion with everybody here in New Brunswick as the people here understeed the question. They have no more desire today to turn over the I. C. R. to the Grand Trunk than they formerly had to turn it over to the C. P. R., and no transformation scheme can meet with general which runs between Quebec and Moncton taps at the latter point the conjunction of the two profitable ends of the I. C. R. namely, the branch from Moncton to St. John and the main line from Moncton to Halifax and Sydney, and if the completed line should be able to capture at Moncton any large proportion of the St. John, Halifax and Sydney business the I. C. R. would become a most unprofitable asset to would become a most unprofitable asset to the country. The people along the I. C. Loup.

As to the policy of constructing a line from Quebec west to Winnipeg, New Brunswickers are, of course, unable to form any definite opinion as to the value of the proposed route, although the general opinion seems to be that what the West needs is rather better communication to the Great Lakes and from the Great Lakes to Montreal, and in the winter to St. John as the winter port.

If it was proposed for the eastern exible from Montreal to St. John the province generally would support it. That would probably bring the road down through the Temiscowata and St. John Rivers' valleys; and while such a railway would not serve the eastern portion of would not serve the eastern portion of New Brunswick the people would be will-ing to support it as the people in this section are already served by the I. C.

The Improved I. C. R.

We in New Brunswick have had some practical means of judging government railway ownership, and the experiment, while not at all times as satisfactorily as James Jardine, of Rexton, Kent county, has written a letter to the Montreal Star discussing Hon. Mr. Blair's resignation and New Brunswick's position in regard to the Grand Trank Pacific scheme. Mr. Jardine, who is well known throughout this province, is a member of the firm of J. & T. which has made them believe that govern-ment ownership and operation of railways are by no means the worst principle in national unity. It as good a road as the I. C. R. is today could be maintained to Parry Sound, or some point at the great lakes, it would be a balancing factor in the great transportation problem, and the people of Quebec and Ontario would cease the cry that the I. C. R. is a burden to the country.
