Thy mighty arm to smooth our way, Thy light to turn our night to day, Onward with firmer steps we roam, On to our everlasting home.

Morning Hymn. Now that the sun is gleaming bright, Implore we, bending low, That He, the uncreated Light, May guide us as we go.

No sinful word, nor deed of wrong, Nor thoughts that idly rove; But simple truth be on our tongue, And in our hearts be love.

And grant that to thine honor, Lord Our daily toil may tend, That we begin it at Thy word, And in Thy favor end.

Leaning on Thee. Leaning on Thee, my Guide, my Friend My gracious Saviour, I am bleased; Though weary, Thou dost condescend To be my rest.

Leaning on Thee, my soul retires From earthly thoughts and earthly things On Thee concentrates her desire

To Thee she clings. Leaning on Thee, though faint and weak-Too weak another voice to hear-Thy heavenly accents comfort speak, 'Be of good cheer.'

Leaning on Thee, with childlike faith, To Thee the future I confide; Thy love shall guide.

Down Hill.

Not long since I had occasion to visit one of our courts, and while conversing with a legal her gray hairs in sorrow down to friend, I heard the name of John Anderson Oh! I hope this may reform him."

I looked upon the man in the prisoner's dock. He was standing up, and plead guilty to the crime of theft. He was a tall man, bent and infirm, though not old. His garb was torn, sparse and filthy; his face was all bloated and blood-shot: hair matted with dirt, and his bowed torm quivered with delirium. Certainly I never but finally resolved to go, though I waited until sionaries in a valley called Le Howl, about sevensaw a more pitiable object. Surely, that man saw a more pitiable object. Surely, that man was not born a villain. I moved my place to obtain a fairer view of his face. He saw my at a glance that Ellen's face was beaming with shorts a more than 20,000 feet in height. They had both been weeping, though I could see at a glance that Ellen's face was beaming with shorts among the inhabitants of this secluded among the inhabitants of this secluded shorts. movement, and he turned his head. his real name, but you shall know him by no other. I will call him by the name that stands upon the records of the court.

was not many years ago-not over twenty-that we left our academy together; he to return to the home of wealthy parents-I, to sit down for a few years in the dingy sanctum of a newspaper office, and then wander off across the ocean. I was gone some four years, and when I returned I found John a married man. His father was dead, and had left his only son a princely for-

"Ah, C___," he said to me as he met me at a railroad station, "you shall see what a bird l have caged. My Ellen is a lark, a robin, a very princess of all birds that ever looked beautiful or sang sweetly."

I found his wife all that he had said, simply omitting the poetry. She was one of the most beautiful women I ever saw. And so good, too -so loving, so kind. Aye, she so loved John, that she readily loved all his friends. What a lucky fellow to find such a wife, and what lucky woman to find such a husband. John Anderson was as handsome as she, tall, straight, and a face as faultlessly noble and beautiful as art ever copied. And he was good, too, and kind, generous and true.

evening I reached his house. He was not in, but his wife and mother were there to receive me, and two curly-headed boys were at play about Ellen's chair. I knew at once they were my friend's children. Everything seemed pleasant until the little ones were in bed and asleep, and then I could see that Ellen was troubled. She tried to hide it, but a face so used to the sunshine of smiles could not conceal a cloud. At length John came. His face was flushed and his eyes looked inflamed. He grasped my hand with a happy laugh, called me "old fellow," "old dog," said I must come and live with him, and many other extravagant things. His wife tried to hide her tears, while his mother shook her head and said : "He'll sow these wild oats soon. My darling could never be a bad man."

"God grant it," I thought to myself; and l knew that the same was upon Ellen's lips. It was late when we retired, and we might not have done so even then, had not John fallen

"Oh," said he, with a laugh, "Oh, that was "John, could you have seen Ellen's face last make her unhappy ?"

He stopped me with-

When I went away John took me by the hand and the last words he said were : "Trust me. Believe in me now; I will be nan henceforth while life lasts." A little over two years had passed, when read in a newspaper the death of Ellen Anderson. I started for the town where they lived as soon as possible, thinking I might help some one.

"Where is John Anderson?" I asked. "Don't know, I'm sure. He has been gon these last three months. His wife died in the mad-house last week ?

" And the children ?" "Oh, they both died before she did." I staggered back and burried from the spot hardly knew which way I went, but instinct ed me to the churchvard. I found four graves which had been made in three years. The mother, wife and two children slept in them. "And what has done this?" I asked myself And a voice answered from the lowly sleeping

But this was not all the work. No, no! The next day I saw it in the city court room. But this was not the last. I saw my legal friend the day following trial. He said John Anderson was in prison. I hastened to see him-the turnkey conducted me to his cell—the key turned in a large lock; the conderous door swung upon its hinges, and I ground. saw a dead body suspended by the neck from a grated window! I looked at the horrible face, out could see nothing of the face of John Ander son there, but the face I had seen in the court room was sufficient to connect the two; and I knew that this was all that remained of him that

The Power of Ideas.

The following touching and felicitous illust ion of the power of ideas was given by Wendell Phillips in a public speech in New York :-"I was told to-day, a story so touching in reference to this, that you must let me tell it. It is a emperance case, but it will illustrate this just as well. A mother, on the green hills of Vermont, my friend. I told him I was sorry to see him as was holding by the right hand a son, sixteen years old, mad with love for the sea. And as plosive, the oil will blaze and flash up almost she stood by the garden gate, one morning, she like powder; if not explosive it will not burn a nothing; only a little wine party. We had a glorious time. I wish you had been there."

WIVES IN INDIA .- A missionary lady, writing o friends in England, mentions many sad things about the state of women and wives in India Among other things, she says :-- " A wife is not thought worthy even to take her husband's name into her lips. She may call him "lord," "master." or the "father of her son," but his name she must never mention. One day one of m mother's servants, an Avah, was taken ill. Sh was a very pretty young woman, and as much loved by her husband as Bengalee wives usually are; yet he refused to get a doctor for her, saving to the poor dying girl, "The money I should now waste on you will pay for my marriage-feast when I marry your successor." DYSENTERY, RELAX, AND WORMS .- POST OF-DE, AYER: Your Pills are the perfection of medicine. They have done my wife more good than I can tell you. She had been sick and pining away for months, Went off to be doctored at great ex-pense, but got no better. She then commenced taking your Pills, which soon cured her, by expelling large quantities of worms (dead) from her body.

They afterwards cured her and our two children of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had it bad, and my wife cured him with two doses of your Pills, while others around us paid from five to twenty dollars doctors' bills, and lost much time, without being cured entirely even then. Such a medicine asyours, which is actually good and honest, will be prized here.
