When Comparisons are odious.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"When in Rome do as the Romans do," is one of the old proverbs whose invariable wisdom I have sometimes doubted, but I am glad it exists, because it gives me a foundation for a new proverb of my own—"When in Rome, don't run Rome down."

A thoroughly charming woman from a distant part of the country has been visiting in our neighbourhood the last few weeks. That is, we all thought her thoroughly charming—the first time we met her. Later several of us modified our opinions and at least left out the "thoroughly," if we didn't actually eliminate the "charming." For sooner or later with all of us, our visitor seized an opportunity to compare our section of the country with the corner from which she came. And needless to say, the comparison was not in our favor.

Our climate—always the first topic of discussion—and our diet, our amusements and our newspapers, our shade trees and our morals, our architecture and our dispositions, our clothes and our time of going to bed and getting up, were all compared with the vastly superior condition of things that prevailed in that part of the world whence she came.

In other matters she appeared to be a person of taste and tact, but somehow in this one thing she seemed to have lost all sense of courtesy or modesty. Now this girl is an extreme example, but I have known a great many people who have his habit in some degree. They would never think of boasting about their own personal attainments, or belittling other people in comparison with themselves, and yet they are always making an opportunity to praise up their homeland at the expense of that corner of the world where the other fellow lives.

To my mind there is only one habit in worse taste, and that is to run down your own home. The jingoism of the American Abroad is deservedly condemned by our more cultured countrymen; and even though we laugh at the "man from home," who, when confronted with the most beautiful architecture in Europe only says, "But you ought to see the Town Hall in Kokomo," we must admit that this sort of thing is in bad taste. Nevertheless I don't think the very worst case of genuine jingoism is half so bad as the perverted jingoism of the disloyal American who is always running down his own country. The jingoist lacks taste and discretion; the traitor lacks heart and human feeling.

However, one need not choose between these two extremes because one need not go to either. There is, as always, a golden mean between them. When in Rome don't run Rome down or your own country either. Neither is necessary nor in good taste, and neither will really endear you to your host.

How The Body Kills Germs.

Germs that get into the body are killed in two ways—by the white corpuscles of the blood, and by a germ-killing substance that is in the blood. Just what this substance is, we do not know. The blood of a healthy person always has some germ-killing substance in it to ward off the attack of disease. The fountain head of life is the stomach. A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished. To put the body in healthy condition, to feed the system on rich, red blood and throw out the poisons from the body, nothing in the past forty years has excelled Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a pure glyceric extract (without alcohol), of bloodroot, golden seal and Oregon grape root, stone root, mandrake and queen's root with black cherrybark.

J. H. MARTIN, Esq.

"My husband was a sufferer from stomach trouble and impure blood," writes Mrs. JAMES H. MARTIN, of Frankfort, Ky. "He had a sore on his face that would form a scab which would dry and drop off in about a month, then another would immediately form. It continued this way for a long time. He tried every remedy that any one would suggest, but found no relief. He then tried Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which completely cured him. He has stayed cured now for three years, and I recommend this valuable medicine for impurities of the blood."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules.

Fashions and Fads.

Fashion authorities tell us that with the spring will be seen millinery flowers of colored tulle, with tiny pearls and stonies for petals. Bright red or yellow silk roses and chrysanthemums in the shape of a knot on bon or muff are most charming on this season's furs.

The lingerie dresses just beginning to be shown in the shops frequently have the fullness of their skirts taken up in handrum tucks.

A charming combination seen at one of the recent French races was a seal-colored tailored suit, with coat and skirt trimmed with silver fox.

A white gown with silver or gold brocade have a note of bright color in the shape of a geranium-colored, purple or green velvet girdle.

Some of the wonderful contrasts of color this year are bright blue with China pink, vivid green with deep violet, capucine with punch red.

Soft little handmade hats of crepe de chine veiled with net and having brims composed of flowers will be worn at the southern resorts.

Green, purple and dark blue is a combination actually seen in tailored suits, and a charming one, because the green is just right that comes between.

In trimming young girls' dresses a great many small, colored roses—usually of chiffon—are seen. Bright blue velvet sashes, edged with small silk roses, are used for lingerie toilettes.

Already Paris is showing summer coats of tussor summer tannage, lined with figured mousseline or voile. Usually these linings are in bright colors.

For a young girl to wear with a dancing frock a dog collar of carved ivory squares is a very delightful thing. Or the squares may be of gold set with turquoise matrix.

A pretty French trick is the wearing of a bright silk handkerchief in a tiny breast pocket—just enough to give a spot of color matching the flower on the hat.

Odd coats of bright colored cropon sole and tussor have short sleeves and basques appearing below high, draped girdles. With these are worn embroidered toile skirts.

A lovely southern gown is of pastel pink crepe, nixon with an overdress printed in lilac shades, and narrow velvet ribbons in petunia color. The broad hat that goes with this has long streamers of the same ribbon.

A pretty French fashion is to use red, green or blue satin or mousseline on a set of furs—lining the muff or working it into the boa. Such muffs are apt to be smaller and round.

The new tailored suits for the Riviera are frequently made of white satin, supple cloth and white velour. Such suits have belts of sapphire blue or virgin's blue, and sometimes a touch of similar blue on the coat collar.

Heels of evening shoes seem to be made not so much to be walked on as to excite envy! Whether embroidered or otherwise decorated they must fall in with the general color scheme of the gown. White heels are seen on black velvet shoes.

Fascinating mantles made to wear in the sunny south are three-quarters long, of light cloth or broche tissues of the color of the dress. The linings of these are often two shades of tissue, and sometimes they are outlined by quiltings of velvet ribbon.

Attractive small hats for the spring are to be made entirely of roses or other small flowers. Soft straw and mousseline will be so worked that it will be impossible to tell which is straw and which is mousseline or ribbon. The brims of these little hats will be jaunty and narrow.

It is but fair to say, however, that the sex should not be judged by the Indiana girl, who had a man arrested on the charge that he attempted to kiss her.
