CHAPTER XXV He sank back exhausted; he had spoken with unusual passion and earnestness, and the feeble frame was not equal to such emotion. Guy bent over him, lifting him in his strong arms and supporting him tenderly during the paroxysm of pain which followed. As he laid him down again the dving eves met his with a leving light in them. "Guy you will forgive. Ah, it is hard. I know. But do not think that he will not suffer: he will regret his baseness bitterly. How can he be happy if he loves her and sees her misery? Lad, do you remember"the dving face was serene once more as the dying yes lingered on Guy's softened face-"the play we read together so long ago, and which you liked so well? Ah, Guy, how would you be, if He which is the top of judgment should but judge you as you are? Forgive him, lad. Promise me you will never seek to harm him

--promise--promise, Guy." The room was very silent for space; the light fell upon both faces from the lamp above them, Sir Jasper's grave, earnest, pleading, Guy's softened truly, but full of bitter resentment still. It was bitter as deatl itself to give that promise. Hug' had been merciless to him-why should he show him mercy? But looking at the dying man who love him, and who had borne a long life of pain so uncomplainingly-who, when revenge lay between his fingers. the hollow of his hand, had laid i aside-he saw to what nobility a man than revenge was the cor can attain, he saw how much great quest which had made him king over himself.

The door opened softly to admi Dickson, who came to the bedside noiselessly, then retreated again at a out quietly, his eyes dim and his lin trembling; the shadow had grown shadow of death. The hail had ceas ed and the sound of the wind was lowered and rain fell.

"Will you not promise me. lad?" "I promise, Uncle Jasper," Guy said, brokenly; and a light of joy, so bright, so vivid, that for a moment it dispersed the gathering darkness shone on the dying face.

At the Casino.

A full house greeted the W. S. Harkins players at the Casino last night, when the sparkling comedy, "The House Next Door" was staged. The performance was under the patronage of His Excellency the Governor and Mrs. Davidson.

The plot is characteristic of the natred once held for the Jews by the English aristocracy, and is one of the finest dramas in the repertoire of the company. Miss Van Duzer and Mr. H. O. Stubbs were seen to advantage in their roles last night, while the other characters were very faithfully portrayed by Miss Cozgriff, Messrs. Conway, Stark and the other members of the company. A very wholesome moral is to be earned from "The House Next Door" will be repeated to-night. Letter From Dr. Fraser.

Dear Mr. Parsons,

Jan. 6th, 1914 In answer to your enquiries regarding the Ford Car which I purchased from you last season-1913, I may say it has given entire satisfaction. It has been in good running order during the whole year, and required no replacements, except to one back brake In addition to the ordinary town work I used the car touring. I took it around Conception Bay as far as Harbor Grace, then across to Trinity Bay, from Heart's Content up the South Shore by Trinity Bay through Heart's Desire, Heart's Delight, Island Cove, Cavendish, Witless Bay, Green's Harbor, New Harbor and theu up to Whitbourne, from Whitbourne to Colinet, then back over the same road, and down to Brigus. Returning to New Harbor we went over the Barrens to Spaniard's Bay. On the Brigus Road we followed a car track three miles taking the car up to the side of the pond where we fished.

Some of these roads, like the Spaniard's Bay Road, were all rocks, and some such as the road near Heart's Desire, soft marsh, but the car is light, has good clearance underneath and is a splendid hill-climber, so that nothing stopped it. It is also light on tires which is a great thing when touring. I had no spare tires on my tour and beyond two small punctures.

Yours truly.
