Dr. Andrew MacKay, who resigned his seat to open this riding for Mr. Rowell, explained the circumstances of Hon. A. G. MacKay's resignation, the choice of Mr. Rowell as leader of the Liberal party, and his own stepping out to make way for the new leader. It was not, the said, of his solicitation; he was not tired of representing North Oxford, but when the matter was presented to him by Mr. Bowman, the Liberal with the hands of the executive committee and the convention of Liberals. The seat the convention of Liberals. The seat was not his but theirs to give, and he had willingly vacated it in the Interests of the Liberal party throughout the province to give Mr. Rowell as afe seat and his own of the Liberal party throughout the province to give Mr. Rowell as afe seat and his convention of Liberals of North Oxford would continue to stand together.

so it was now in a worse condition than when it took charge was shown by Mr. Rowell, particularly with regard to closing model schools. Of what value, he asked, were cheap text-books and good school buildings if we had not what was vital to allegood teachers? He gave credit to the Whitney Government for one good thing—putting the university on a better financial basis stand giving it a better organization. The gampting the university commission and investigated the whole matter. The commission framed a constitution for the university commission and investigated the whole matter. The commission framed a constitution for the university and the Government had wisdom enough to accept these men's recommendations without trying to meddle with them. Mr. Rowell pointed out the need of measures to greatly increase the number of male teachers to teachers of a robust, manly stamp on boys, and a statesman or an educator. "I should not have much respect," he said, "for teachers who are kept in the province by force, and not because they wanted to stay."

couragement and inducement to mento improve their property? We are all affected by these things. Sir James is opposed to this, we advocate it; choose which you will. I know what your choice will be. This is no new thing. The bulk of the Conservative newspapers in this province if they could frankly express their mind would come out and say, "That's right; we approve your position."

Mr. Rowell dealt also with the matters of encouraging the agriculture and fruit industries and temperance reform, and appealed to the electors, though he was unable to spend much time with them at present, if they approved of his being called to the leadership, to give him one of the largest majorities ever given to a Liberal in North Oxford. The meeting closed with the National Anthem and cheers for Mr. Rowell and Dr. MacKay.

ART IN WALL DECORATIONS

If you are looking for something different in wall decoration to beautify the home for the Christmas gathering, consult our designing artist in wall paper department, where various schemes are illustrated and practical suggestions offered in artistic decorating to assist you in carrying out your own ideas or suggest something you had not thought of. To enhance the beauty of a well-planned room careful thought should be given to the selecting of the wall papers—designs, colorings and quality should be considered with a view to harmonious treatment. If beauty is not combined with practical utility it is not the work of art, and many designs, very charming in themselves and attractive, are rendered unattractive because of their unappropriateness for the practical purposes required of them. We mention here some of the high-class decorations carried in stock.

Japanese grass cloths in fine and coarse weaves, also Japanese leathers in plain and pattern effects, also choice selection of English chintz and two-tone papers. Hand-colored papers and friezes by Shand Kydd, also complete stock of hand-colored crown silks and pressed papers, designed and colored by De Fosse and Karth. Paris, France. We are also sole dealers in this city for Birges high class panel decorations and leathers, and carry a large stock of both Canadian and American papers and German leatherette room mouldings and burlaps. We will be pleased to give estimates on any class of interior decorating. None but skilled workmen in our employ. WALL PAPERS-THIRD FLOOR.
