This appears to us to be altogether wrong. The road monies are not for such cases as these, but for districts where there is little or no statute labor, or where this, after being honestly expended, is not sufficient to meet the requirements of a district, owing to its great length or difficulty of keeping up. The time may not be very far distant when the entire maintenance and construction of our roads will be thrown upon the municipality, so it behooves us to begin to practice self-reliance and economy in these This appears to us to be altogether wrong.

The other day the young Khedive of writes as follows :all. The other day the young Khedive of Egypt took it upon himself to dismiss his ministers and replace them by others not friendly to Great Britain. Thereupon Mr. Gladstone's government held a hastily called cabinet meeting, and after fully considering the Egyptian question in all its bearings, sent the youthful Khedive a diplomatic mote. This note was not necessarily for publication but as an evidence of good faith.

In it the young man was told that John Bull would put up with no nonsense, and he was given forty-eight hours to dismiss the objectionable ministers or take the consequences. Later despatches report that, the Khedive has yielded every point demanded, and has given an assurance that in future only such advisers as are agreeable to Great Britain will be chosen. Indeed no other course was open to him. Since the bombardmen of Alexandria some eight or ten years ago Britain has had an army in Egypt which places that country completely under her control and before which the Khedive is absolutely helpless.
