

SOUTHWESTERN

THE COLLEGE OF THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY

MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

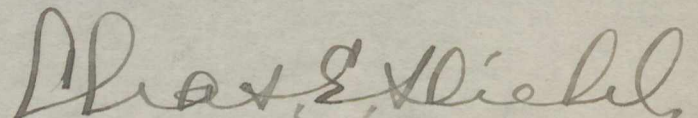

September 30, 1925.

My dear Chancellor:

After five years of strenuous effort this institution, formerly known as Southwestern Presbyterian University, and located in Clarksville, Tennessee, has amended its charter and is opening this month in Memphis, Tennessee, as SOUTHWESTERN. It is the same institution which was chartered in 1875, and bears the same relationship to the Synods of Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana of the Presbyterian Church. Its removal to such a strategic location as Memphis is fraught with great significance to the entire lower Mississippi Valley, and is a unique event in the educational world.

It is planned to have from November twenty sixth to twenty eighth a celebration of the Semi-Centennial of the College, co-incident with the Inaugural in Memphis, and we are greatly desirous that other institutions should unite with us in this celebration. I am writing to express the earnest hope that your institution may be represented on this occasion either by yourself or by someone whom you may delegate. Later there will be sent you a program, but this invitation is extended thus early in the hope that you may be able to arrange for representation on the part of your institution. We shall appreciate your letting us know at your early convenience whether you can be represented, as well as the name, position and degrees of your delegate.

Very sincerely yours,

The Chancellor,
McGill University,
Montreal, Canada.
