of all sizes and at all prices. This beautiful department, with its well lit white cases and delightful easy chairs covered with peacock chintz, its leaded glass windows with their little curtains exquisitely hand-painted in a peacock design, and the wonderful Whistler lambrequin which forms the entrance, combined with the scintillating light which falls from the old French chandeliers—is well worth a visit, if only to give an idea of what may be done in these days in the way of artistic shop decoration. And then the profusion of the exquisite garments, all so dainty and so reasonable in price—surely no one, not even the most confirmed grumbler, could fail to appreciate the beauty and artistic value of such a department to this city and to its visitors.

Mid-day Rambles

You people of unlimited leisure, do you ever consider if you had but one precious hour out of the twenty-four all to yourself, how you would spend it?

Some of you would declare you would devote it to reading a fine book, to listening to good music, to gazing on some famous painting, or maybe you would spend it visiting, sight-seeing or resting, but few, I think, would take their greatest pleasure as I do, in wandering about the large stores, watching the various specimens of humanity hurrying about their business, or leisurely purchasing the wares so temptingly displayed.

Every day between twelve and one I find myself unconsciously wending my way to Simpson's, and I always find so much to occupy me that I hope you may be interested in my daily accounts of what I find there.

To-day I was irresistibly attracted to the Paris Gown Department, for, you know, in the Spring a young maid's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of clothes, and before I realized it my precious hour had departed, but it carried away with me the feeling that I had spent the hour with gracious hostesses, all gowned in soft grey Spring-like dresses and my particular friend had given me a glimpse of some of the new importations that had arrived this very day.

The first gown to attract my attention was a cerise and black striped foulard, so simply trimmed with black satin, and the new modish collar, that, with a large black hat, it could be worn for any occasion, dress or street wear. I surreptitiously turned over the price tag—surely I must be mistaken—$25.00—I looked again; it was still $25.00.

On a figure near at hand was a more elaborate creation, but then you would be willing to pay $120.00 for it, when you examined the beautiful lace fichu—the dernier cri in gowns,—and saw that the black satin belt was all that was needed to make this rose and white satin a gown to create considerable envy at the races. The black and white tassel straw hat accompanying this creation was exactly suitable to the Spring meet.

A brown and white ninon dress next claimed my attention, touches of lettuce, green and black completed the beautiful effect and the large black hat, with its net bow and single rose, were in exquisite taste.

Surely I haven't spent a whole hour here—yes, there is the one o'clock whistle, so I must bid good-bye—no, it will be "au revoir" to my beautiful dresses, for they are almost as truly mine as they will be to the fortunate owners who wear them, for they are the gowns of my loveliest dreams.

Is Your Home in Tune With May and June?

Try to have all the joy of these perfect months reflected in your home, by imitating outside nature—brighten things up, renew! Come to our 4th and 5th Floors on Monday and see how we've planned to help you in this matter.

Values rank first in our Carpet Department: The sweetness of low price never equals the bitterness of low quality. It is the rugs and the carpets, their goodness, and their prices that make our Carpet Department the busy spot that it is.

All its cheeriness and all its excellent light would be of little use without the great variety and the excellent value of the carpets and the rugs, and the mattings and other floor coverings that are spread out there.

Right now, there is a specially good assembly of rugs and of carpets. There is wisdom in having what folks want when they want it. We are ready.

Mainstay of the rugs is the splendid collection of machine-made Orientals. We've yet to hear of a person disappointed in these rugs; they wear as well as they look—they could do no more. They are made in a dozen or more sizes from 4 feet 6 inches x 6 feet, up to 11 feet 3 inches x 15 feet; the prices ranging from $9.00 to $70.00.
