While at breakfast Saturday morning the guests of the Robertson House, Bathurst, were astonished to see two deer grazing in the garden in front of the hotel. Being disturbed they ran to the garden of Mr. Gellis, where they stayed for some time. They eventually ran to the river and swam across the harbor to the village.

HE WANTS HELP

Editor Times,
Sir,—I saw by your paper that The Royal Arcanum were making arrangements to endow hospital beds for the use of sick and disabled members of the order. I send in my application through your paper for help. I have paid into the Royal Arcanum treasury over one thousand dollars. The premiums were raised so high that in my case they were prohibitive. There is not a member of the order as sick and disabled as I am.
Yours,
SUFFERER.

THE ART OF SWIMMING

Series of Brief Articles of Great Value Will Begin in The Times on Saturday.

The appalling number of deaths from drowning, recorded in the press of late, makes of particular interest and value a series of articles on swimming which will appear in the Evening Times, beginning next Saturday.

These articles have been prepared by Prof. Tom Wilkinson, A. S. A., late of Oldham, England, swimming instructor to the Oldham education committee, and holder of the Royal Life Saving Society's certificate as a swimming instructor. Prof. Wilkinson is now in St. John, and also gives instructions in swimming, and has already a number of pupils. The articles which will appear in this paper will deal with the art and practice of swimming with illustrations; saving the life of drowning persons; and the subject of swimming as a necessary part of education. Many parts of England. The Times recently quoted some remarks from Inspector Hughes, of Toronto, who expressed his surprise at the number of swimming baths found in connection with English schools.

Readers of the Times should secure and preserve Saturday's issue and each issue thereafter until the short but comprehensive series of articles is completed. [St. John people desiring instruction in swimming during Prof. Wilkinson's stay in St. John can communicate with him at 545 Main street.]

PUBLIC PLAYGROUNDS

Interesting Letter from Miss Mabel Peters Telling of Playground Developments in Other Cities.

Westfield, Aug. 1
Editor Times:
Sir,—Playground developments of significance and great interest may be gleaned from recent reports gathered by the city department "Charities," a journal of philanthropy and social advance, published weekly in New York city.
In Buffalo the playgrounds have been transferred from the care of the public works board to the health board, with enlarged appropriation. In Newark, N. J., the mayor, authorized by the legislature of that state, has appointed a board of playground commissioners, whose duty it will be to select in different parts of the city land for public playgrounds and have the general care of playground interests. The city of Los Angeles has also appointed a special playground commission. In Washington, D. C., the board of education has adopted a resolution recommending that all future school sites contain at least one playground. In Chicago, a board of playground commissioners has been appointed to study the playground problem in that city. In Boston, a monthly magazine, of which the editor is the author of "The Playground Problem," has secured a bond issue of $50,000 for the purchase of a playground of fifteen acres in the heart of the city. The school board of that city has made a demonstration in behalf of the purchase which helped carry the referendum. Lexington, Ky., has issued bonds to purchase a $40,000 playground. Minneapolis recently set aside a tract of 40 acres near the centre of the city for a park and playground. In Denver, Col., a playground commission has been appointed to study the playground problem in that city. In St. Paul, Minn., a playground commission has been appointed to study the playground problem in that city. In New York city, a playground commission has been appointed to study the playground problem in that city. In Philadelphia, Pa., a playground commission has been appointed to study the playground problem in that city. In London, England, a playground commission has been appointed to study the playground problem in that city.

Other reports received by the writer state that Allegheny, Pa., granted a voluntary bond issue of $25,000 for the summer's playground work; that Cleveland, Ohio, has this season largely inland playground work; that Detroit, Mich., is expending $100,000 on its playgrounds, which opened July 15th for a seven-weeks' course, that at least 35 cities of the United States are at the present moment conducting vacation schools and playgrounds with increased interest and larger appropriations than ever before.

A feature of playground interest that could easily be duplicated in St. John by volunteers, is that of story telling at intervals each day. In some cities, notably Chicago, where an expert is now engaged, "story ladies" gather about her groups of children, graded by their ages, and relate stories of heroism or of patriotism, child life tales, or read short stories. In Detroit, when the playgrounds were conducted by the Local Council of the public depend the ultimate success and usefulness of the supervised playground.

MABEL PETERS.

HALIFAX PLAYGROUNDS

Regarding the supervised playgrounds in Halifax the Chronicle says:—
"At least one hundred and twenty-five dollars is still required for the supervised playground movement. When the project was started this year it was calculated that at least $350 would be required. So far $225 has been raised by subscription. The school board has given a grant of $150, so there is still a considerable balance to be made up. No one who has watched the happy and contented kiddies delving in the sand piles at their games, or being instructed in some useful art by the painstaking supervisor of the grounds can doubt that this institution is one of the most deserving in Halifax. Not since the grounds were opened has the interest in them slackened and every day they are filled with happy faced youngsters who have nowhere to go during their vacation. Instruction in Russia basket making is being given at the Bloomfield school and these baskets will be sold for the benefit of the fund."

EDITOR O'BRIEN'S ROD

(St. Andrew's Beacon.)
Editor O'Brien of the Monitor, who is well qualified to speak of affairs of the heart, sagely observes: "If marriage be a lottery, the risks are greatly increased by the young man wandering forth into the wide world, a toy of adventure. Better fish for brook trout at home rather than throw a line into the wide, wide sea, where sharks and devil fish float around awaiting their prey." That's so, Bro. O'Brien. Better get your fishing rod out.
