The plane was delivered this morning, much to our delight, although sometimes I catch my breath when I remember to pay.

I told Mr. Buskin that perhaps if he advertised for second-hand electric fans he might be able to get them cheap. "All right," he said, "you write the ad, young lady." Goodness, I seem to have written such a lot of them since I came to town.

Aunt Mary sent a box of cookies. She must be worrying about my not getting enough to eat. Poor dear! She just must worry about something.
