GOOD OPENING

BILL AT NICKEL

Weekly Budget of World's News Pictures Proved Strong Feature in Big Picture House Yesterday.

As a week-opening yesterday's show at the Nickel met with universal approval, and although weather conditions were anything but auspicious, and despite counter attractions incidental to the season, fairly large audiences enjoyed the programme.

The weekly budget of world's news forms a striking feature of the bill, and crowds into a short period of time a large fund of information about the world's doings generally. Up to the minute in the chronicle of current events, the Nickel in its news budget for the week, reproduces for its patrons a number of war pictures, depicting some of the most important incidents of the Balkan struggle. Among others the allied fleet of the great powers is shown riding in the harbor at Constantinople for protection of foreign residents in the event of an uprising among the natives, the fall of Serrai, the food troubles in Serbia, and several others too numerous to mention.

"Black Beauty" the life story of a horse, furnishes something new in the picture line. The expression "horse sense" is quite common in ordinary parlance, but after watching the doings of "Black Beauty," the expression doesn't seem so far astray after all, for the equine which forms the central figure in the story, displays an extraordinary share of sagacity, or instinct developed to an eminent degree. The story is one that must appeal to all.

The comedy portion of the programme is supplied in the film "A Hospital Boax," wherein an amorous swain is cured of his love-sickness by a practical nurse.

Signor Mario Manetta begins the week with the ever-popular "Come back to Erin," which affords splendid opportunities for the display of his magnificent voice. As an encore he sang "Giribardin," Francis and Marr in musical mix-up proved a good feature.

The same programme will be repeated this afternoon and evening.

A Dangerous Counterfeit.

Washington, Dec. 30.—Alarm seized officials of the United States treasury today on the discovery of a remarkable counterfeit five dollar silver certificate, the most dangerous imitation of American currency since the famous "Monroe head" one hundred dollar bill was suppressed in 1898.

Sentences on the following were suspended: Patrick J. Farrell, New York; James Cooney, Chicago; Jas. Coughlin, Chicago; Hiram R. Kline, Munire, Ind.; Frank J. Murphy, Detroit.

On motion of the government Edward Clark, Cincinnati, confessed dynamite, was given a suspended sentence. Orville B. McDaniel, another confessed dynamite, was not sentenced at this time.

The elimination of those who received suspended sentences left the thirteen who are to go to Leavenworth, where the shortest sentence will be one year and one day.

Steps toward appeals in behalf of all the prisoners to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals already have been taken. H. Krum, who is the other counsel, appeared before Judge Anderson late today to arrange for the filing of writs of error. This formality may be done tomorrow.

Meantime, Mr. Krum said, there was no prospect of procuring liberty for any of the men through super-seede as bonds. All the prisoners are to go to Leavenworth.

Before Judge Anderson passed sentence he said he desired to read a statement. He then reviewed the history of the dynamite conspiracy as well as the evidence introduced and said:

"This scheme or campaign of dynamite was entered into and carried on throughout the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

"The evidence discloses an appalling list of crimes in addition to those charged in the indictments. These crimes were all committed in the name of organized labor. I will not believe that organized labor approved such practices.

"Any organization that approves and adopts the methods of these defendants is an outlaw and will meet the fate which outlaws have met since civilized society began.

"The evidence shows some of these defendants to be guilty of murder, but they are not charged here with that crime; this court cannot punish them for it, nor should it be influenced by such consideration in fixing the measure of punishment for the crimes charged.

"The certainty of punishment, not its severity, is the important consideration in the administration of criminal justice. Such punishment should be meted out as shall warn others that even if they desire to accomplish lawful ends, they must not violate the law in the attempt to realize them.

"The evidence in this case shows that almost one hundred explosives, damaging and destroying structures in process of erection, by and machinery of, open shop concerns took place, culminating on the first day of October, 1910, in the destruction of the Los Angeles Times building, and the murder of twenty-one persons."

At 2:15 o'clock the prisoners shuffled to Deputy Marshall's steps out of the federal building on their way to the county jail, and began to sing "On the Banks of the Rhine."

The singing continued with crying women and children following the procession, almost until the jail was reached. Every effort by the officials to stop the demonstration caused louder singing.

The wives and friends of the convicted men had taken leave of them a half hour before Marshall's Sublet ordered the prisoners to get ready for the trip to the jail.

TURKEY STAKES HER ALL

ON MEDIATION BY POWERS;

ALLIES OBJECT STRONGLY

Allies Will Issue Ultimatum.

The allies propose to bring affairs to a crisis by a statement in the nature of an ultimatum at the next session of the conference on Wednesday. They express the determination not to waste more time in waiting for telegraphic consultations, real or pretended, between Constantinople and the Turkish delegates in London, and will meet at an early hour Wednesday to decide upon their policy.

In the camp of the allies the proposal for mediation has been received with varying degrees of dissatisfaction. All are agreed that mediation would be possible of acceptance only if the authority entrusted to the mediators was of such limits that it would be impossible to deprive the victors of conquests rightfully gained; that it must be mediation taking into account the present status of the belligerents, not the ante bellum status, and above all, that it must be mediation, not arbitration.

Arbitration, it is pointed out, was possible before the conflict, not afterwards, unless in questions of details such as the delimitation of frontiers not well defined by ethnographical landmarks.

Allies Dissatisfied.

Serbia and Montenegro are most dissatisfied of all, in the belief that it will be impossible to secure impartial mediation by the powers, which include Austria, a nation which has shown in the past, and is showing now, such a threatening attitude against what those states assert is legitimate aspiration.

Greece trembles at the mere idea of the power meddling with the provinces she claims, as they have done with Crete since December, 1898, when Prince George was appointed high commissioner of the island. The allies also fear Italian aspirations.

Dr. Daneff did not seem adverse to European mediation, trusting "in the opinion of the Christian civilized world over the jealousies, rivalries and greed of the governments of the prolonged state of servitude, the waste of life and the impoverishment of the Balkans during the last century."

The rumors in circulation that Turkey has concluded a loan of many millions are absolutely untrue. Tentative proposals in this direction have been made by the Turkish minister of finance, but they have been met with coldness.

This recalls an analogous answer given to Count Witte, the Russian plenipotentiary, shortly after he landed in New York for the Russo-Japanese conference at Portsmouth. On the voyage to the United States he had arranged that a journalist, a mutual friend, should introduce him to Pierpont Morgan, the American financier. In an interview with the latter, Count Witte made allusion to the possibility of launching a Russian loan in the United States, to which Mr. Morgan replied that he would find no money for war but as much as was desired after the conclusion of peace.

POLLANDS AS GOOD AS EVER

Juvenile Opera Company

Scored Great Hit in The Toy

Makers, Last Evening—Teddy

McNamara a Favorite.

The wonderful and whimsical spirit of Australia with its mercurial temperament, its delight in vivid contrast, its ardent radicalism and its august mysticism, its passion for the bright and gay, its queer infatuation for the sombre and the grotesque, has in "The Toy Maker" a fitting vehicle by which to present itself to a Canadian audience, and in Poland's Juvenile Opera Company The Toy Maker has a group of players possessed with the mercurial temperament, the vivacity and severe exaltation necessary to a vivid interpretation of the famous comedy.

Many a company of adults could not give a finer presentation than the performance of the Australian juvenile last evening; the company was exceptionally well balanced, and all the players gave a fine rendition of their parts.

St. John theatre goers evidently had pleasant memories of the former visit of the company, for in spite of the brutal weather there was a fair attendance. And the audience evidently enjoyed the performance, for they were very liberal with applause, and so many encores were called for that it was after eleven o'clock before the performance was concluded.

In spite of the fantastical character of the plot, the players, assisted by striking, though not elaborate, stage effects, managed to create an atmosphere of illusion calculated to make even the staid and sober citizens surrender themselves in childlike wonder to the impression of having wandered into a world of phantasy; and at any rate the audience abandoned itself wholeheartedly to the enjoyment of grotesque and mirth-provoking situations, the splendid solos and choruses, the fine dancing, the beautiful costumes and charming players, the scenes stately and sombre or brilliant with color and animation.

Teddy McNamara, as the toy maker, and chief fun-maker, left little to be desired, and kept the audience convulsed with merriment. Miss Nellie McNamara, who has a beautiful voice, took the part of Father Maxime, and her songs were greatly enjoyed and enthusiastically endorsed. Miss Eva Pollard, as the daughter of the toy maker, was a charming rendition of her part, and Patsie Hill, as the niece, handled her role in an excellent manner.

A striking number was "A Joyful Monk am I," sung by Nellie McNamara, who has a strong, richly colored voice. Among the others who were their part, and Patsie Hill, as the niece, handled her role in an excellent manner.

Secure orderly exit of the pupils. March them two by two. Let them hold hands or link arms. Let there be music or singing to divert their minds.

Teachers should follow to be sure that no child has been left behind. Sometimes the teacher or an older child might lead, but if the teacher gets too far from the end of the line, he or she might not be able to get back to take care of stragglers.

Older children may be detailed as monitors to look after stragglers or absentees.

Older and stronger children should lead to prevent overcrowding.

Boys should lead and girls follow, or vice versa, but not both.

Boys often trample girls in a rush and girls are always sure to be frightened at boys coming down behind them.

Success depends on prompt discovery of fire and sound of signal.

Alarm boxes should be at accessible distances, transmitting alarms throughout the entire building and showing the floor on which there is a fire.

Children should be taught in the course of drills to overcome obstructions, to be prepared to meet them at the door of exit.

Post notices and distribute handbills or cards that a fire drill is to be introduced. Later distribute a second notice, giving details of the drill.

Give copies of these notices to all that they may take them home and learn them or have them fully explained.

Distribute the handbills, giving the rules and explicit directions to be followed.

Schools should have individual signal boxes connecting directly with the local fire department.

Fire drills should be to the fire escapes as well as to the exits.

Fire drills should conclude with the sound of the alarm, the children out of and away from the school in different directions.

Fire drills should aim at a quick dismissal, without going for coats or hats.

Fire drills should be had frequently but at irregular and secret times.

Repetition will familiarize children with their duties and, if fire does break out, they will not be taken unawares.

Have printed copies of these rules posted conspicuously in schools.

Occasionally have a free-fighting instruction programme. There should be short talks on fire prevention, evils of carelessness, need of cleanliness in homes and surroundings, and damage by fire to life and property. These lessons should be free from excitement and addressed to the common sense of the pupils, rather than to their feelings and imagination. Their feelings should not be aroused by stories of the horrors of fires or references to any particular disaster. They should be interested in simple means of fire fighting and handling materials which come under their daily observation at home or at school. The most fires are of the same size at the start, the flame of a match carelessly handled or thrown away; a candle, a lamp or a gas stove, apart from a locomotive, a burning cigarette or cigar carelessly thrown away, and that any one of these may cause great loss of life and property.

Have call number of fire department in clear sight near telephone, and call fire department instantly.

Reports should be made from time to time of the fire drills and their execution.

Here's a picture of a "dog slaughter house" in Berlin, a tragic sign of the high cost of living in the Fatherland. The proprietor deals exclusively in dog meat, and so great is the demand, owing to the high price of beef, that he cannot get dogs enough to supply his customers.

The butcher's boy in the picture has a tray of dog meat on his shoulder and the two live dogs are intended for slaughter.

CHALLENGE

New York, Dec. 28.—Sec. Robert C. Watson of the United States Golf Association sent out letters today to a number of American professionals with a view to ascertaining just who of them contemplate a trip to Great Britain next spring and also announcing that he had received a letter from P. Deschamps, president of the Golf Club de Paris of La Boule, enclosing a challenge for American "pros" to a match on French links against an equal number of Frenchmen.

Watson sent a reply to M. Deschamps today that if possible the international match would be arranged and of the fact that the matter of selecting a representative American team would be taken up at the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association on January 11. There will be half a dozen Americans to compete in the British open championship shortly before the French.

In view of the foregoing international golf in 1913 will be a feature of the season, for in addition to the visit of American professionals to Europe, there will be probably a dozen or more well-known amateurs to go abroad for the amateur title.

The following announcement was issued by Sec. Watson:

"The matter of picking an American team will be taken up at the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association on Jan. 11, 1913. The proposed dates for the Franco-American match are on either June 27 or 28 or else June 30 and July 1, which is to be left to the option of the American team."
