NOTES AND NEWS.

UNITED STATES.

It is said that Robert Bonner spends $200,000 a year for advertising the Ledger.

Hammond, the revivalist, is playing the mischief with the theatres and other places of amusement in Missouri.

A large number of them have been closed owing to the superior attractions of Hammond.

An impressive warning against attempting to do unusual feats without gradual practice is pointed by the Press of Lafayette, Indiana, in the case of a citizen who was drowned in the canal while trying to wash himself.

A Texas jury has given a verdict which indicates that two and a half per cent. a month interest is too much to expect to collect on loans down here.

Forwarded is forwarded, and money-lenders will have to be cautious when they "go to Texas."

A gentleman who came several thousand miles to visit the country with the purpose of purchasing, got a large-sized ant on him a few days ago, and, strange as he was, he carried around and used as appropriate language as if he had lived here all his life, and moved in the best of society.

If you want to read all about more robberies, murders, outrages and other black crimes that ever darkened the record of any community in both hemispheres, by a New Orleans paper and see what fellows the streets are doing for a living down there, it beats the Arabian Nights.

Now, who'd have thought it? Ex-Commissioner Marshall says that the ratio of drunkenness is twenty per cent. less in New York than in Boston or Brooklyn, and that there has been a decrease of thirty per cent. in the number of crimes resulting therefrom during the past year. This is comfort for Sodom.

Boston has the honor.

Philadelphia specialists state that the meeting of the iron-masters there on Friday was a very gloomy one, and it is believed that half of the tonnage now in blast will be extinguished by the 1st of September. One man stated that he was paying men only one dollar per day, who formerly earned $5 per day, and even at this low rate for labor could not make iron at a profit.

Letters from a number of furnace owners throughout the country show the same depression.

Now we know all about it. An enormously learned climatologist tells the world, in Gaiter's, how our incipient summer got nipped in the bud, thereby "the children of that time, of the earth passes behind a ring of asteroids, which absorb a portion of the sun's warmth due to a white ring remains above the horizon. The temperature will not return to its normal condition until the small planets which have a ring projected on the same point of our orb."

Everything, it seems, was not lovely at the recent high-life wedding at Senator Stewart's home in Washington. The supper-room of the guests became full of tea and coffee or other cheering liquid dates, was turned into a scene of riotous confusion, which resulted in considerable breakage of glass and china, and compelled the hostess to order the guests to be ejected.

In other words, the guests behaved disgracefully, just as often happens in Washington, and for that matter in other places. The fact seems to be that putting "Hion," before some men's names does not make gentlemen of them.

GENERAL.

The world is forgetful of its benefactors. Who knows the name of the man who invented chewing gum?

The cable despatch stating that Don Carlos's army had captured a paper of cigarettes proves untrue.

The Danbury Jews man will present a copy of his Almanac to the Queen if she consents to an introduction.

A young man of this city, who was engaged to be married, saw one of his sweet-heart's stockings floating from a clothes-line the other day and concluded he wouldn't.

If cremation should be universally adopted, we don't know what the undertakers would do with their supply of patent burial cases, unless they use them for putting up fresh fruits and vegetables instead of all-right cases.

An exchange asks, "Why is it that there are many bald-headed men and so few bald-headed women?" We presume it is because few husbands are so unmanly as to snatch their wives bald-headed, no matter what the provocation may be.

A German Jew was eating a pork chop in a thunderstorm. On hearing an unusually loud clap, he laid down his knife and fork, and observed: "Well, did any pork ever hear such a fuss about a little piece of pork?"

An ardent lover, pouring out his passionate devotion in verse, spoke of that night when, walking with his sweetheart, he "kissed her under the silent stars." In print he was made to say that he "kissed her under the cellar stairs."

It is reported that an explosion occurred Friday morning in the colliery at Clay Cross, in Derbyshire, attended by a terrible loss of life. Some thirty miners are said to have been killed and a large number injured.

Colonel Martineau, a veteran of the First Empire, has just died in France at the age of ninety years. He was, under Napoleon, aide-camp to General Bessieres, and at the Bourbon restoration became one of the gentlemen of the Chamber of Louis XVIII.

The Duke of Edinburgh, though a sailor, must needs be identified with the land service; therefore the Ninety-ninth regiment of foot has been chosen to bear his colors, and hereafter will be known as the Duke of Edinburgh's regiment.

It doesn't pay sometimes to be too good a mimic. Down in Texas, the other day, two men were out turkey-trotting. One of them, who was a very good mimic, was making a very good imitation of the "hobble-de-gobble" business, which is a necessary accompaniment to turkey-trotting, and so they heard each other's noise and both laid low for a good shot. Finally, one man

THE BOLD CALIFORNIA BRIGAND.

The capture of the famous brigand Tiburcio Vasquez, whose bold and lawless gang has long spread terror over Southern California, is a subject for intense gratification there. On more than one occasion Vasquez and four or five of his men dashed into small villages, robbed the stores and dwellings, stripped the citizens of their watches, jewelry and money, and then rode leisurely away, carrying their booty, such was the reputation of the leader of the bandits for desperate robbery and bloody ferocity that his robbers than to run the risk of attacking him. His exploits finally became so numerous that Governor Vasquez was secured in one house of a Mexican within a hundred yards of the house the men plunged into the dense mustard thicket which surrounded it. Vasquez in front, ready to strike the front of the band, they battered down. Vasquez was within, but, ever on the alert, he jumped out of a narrow window. As he touched the ground and started for the grove he was brought down by a shot, and in a moment was surrounded by others of the party. Desperately wounded as he was, he did not for a moment cease his coolness, but, with a steady eye, he calmly awaited his captors, and in his broken English said, "You are good men. I ought not to say so." He was wounded in the head and leg, but not mortally, and was taken to Los Angeles.

polled trigger, and to behold, he performed a worthy freedman instead of a turkey. The deceased was a first-rate potter, but a very poor tailor, and, by once, he talked turkey to poor purpose.

Morbid Impulse.

Dr. Wm. A. Hammond read an interesting paper Thursday night before the members of the New York Medico-Legal Association on "Morbid Impulse," that strange psychic force which impels men to the commission of crime when there would appear to be no possible reason for it. The theme was ably handled, and the essay was so little burdened with technical nomenclature as to be perfectly intelligible in all its parts to the most unsophisticated of the Doctor's auditors.

The lecturer instanced as a singular illustration of the effect of the morbid impulse the case recently reported in The Sun of a man who, while in his garden with his little daughter, saw a sudden and almost irresistible impulse to murder her with his spade.

The reply was: "Keep the morbid impulse under the control of your will. If you allow it to take possession of you, you will be guilty of murder." The man was in every way healthy, and this singular temptation to attack women in his street, thrown down them, and take their shoes from their feet. When he was arrested, he confessed, on examination, that he did so under an irresistible impulse that he was only for the time in such condition mentally that he took pleasure in doing harm to others.

Now, who'd have thought it? Ex-Commissioner Marshall says that the ratio of drunkenness is twenty per cent. less in New York than in Boston or Brooklyn, and that there has been a decrease of thirty per cent. in the number of crimes resulting therefrom during the past year.
