

material. The waist has a full back and full fronts arranged over a lining that is closely fitted by the usual darts and seams.

Gathers at the neck, shoulder and lower edges hold the fulness well toward the center of the front and back, the fronts standing out in puff fashion at the closing, which is made invisibly at the center. The fulness at the front and back appears effectively between boleros that are seamless under the arms and pass into the shoulder seams. The boleros are rounded away from the shoulders at the front and back and form a point under each arm; they are outlined with a frill of narrow batiste embroidery. Large, gathered puffs are arranged on the coat-shaped sleeves, which may be cut off below the puffs if elbow sleeves be desired. A ribbon bow is tacked to the center of the puff and from it a ribbon is carried to the shoulder, where it disappears under a ribbon arranged about the arm's-eye and bowed on the shoulder. Similar ribbon was used for a stock that covers the standing collar, and for a belt that is formed in a double loop-bow with long ends at the back.

The skirt consists of a front-gore and two circular sections, the circular sections being joined in a center seam below the placket. The skirt is gathered at each side of the placket and falls in flutes at the back and below the hips. At the front it spreads broadly toward the lower edge, which measures five yards and a half in the medium sizes.

A triple combination may be effected in this costume by using velvet for the boleros, silk or chiffon for the full portions and mohair, cheviot, one of the canvas weaves or novelty goods for the rest of the costume. Embroidered bands, ribbon and jetted or spangled trimmings are suitable decorations.

We have pattern No. 8563 in thirteen sizes for ladies from twenty-eight to forty-six inches, bust measure. In the combination shown for a lady of medium size, the costume will require six yards and a half of crêpon forty inches wide, with a yard and three-fourths of embroidered grass lint twenty-seven inches wide. Of one material, it will need twelve yards and a half twenty-two inches wide, or nine yards and a half thirty inches wide, or eight yards and an eighth thirty-six inches wide, or six yards and three-fourths forty-four inches wide. Price of pattern, 1s. 8d. or 40 cents.
