After looking at the cover of the Feb. 12/79 issue of way, 1 suddenly became of the existence of a truly cc. With the exception of Olmstead, the entire SU appears to be of less than ge height, $5^{\prime} 91 / 4$ ". It seems that there are two possible ns for this trend, outlined

Firstly, since the U of A is enough to be an acceptable base, an analysis of the recently students who ude that the $25 \%$ of the nts who voted are likely to above average height. I feel the reason for this is that people would not elect one who they had to look while tall people would not verse to electing an Exec. could look down on, and a dent that they could be on level with. However, it d be noted that this is only of the reason, as students, of es, tend to look down on Uxec. anyway he second possibility, and ne that should be feared is that short people are active politically due to an ority complex. Some le examples of this are leon, Hitler, Mao Tse etc. They possess a subsous recognition of their aificance, and to compendevelop a need for a feeling aportance, often manifested cial dominance. They are y aware of the truth in the $y$ of Social Darwinism by Richard Bach, in alhan Livingston Seagull: gull who flies highest see's acknowledging the ority of tall people.
IWould like to propose the wing motion be incorEd in the eligibility rules for Executives: "Candidates Executives: "Candidates be above average in all noteably height, moral ct, and intelligence". This would, 1 believe, ensure us of an executive who are both morally and physically outstanding. A goal whose advantages are would ensure that all S.U candidates would be willing to undergo a pre-term session on The Rack", designed to increase their height, in addition to their term of office.

Sabarb

Your sarcasm in the Feb. 8 issue was enjoyable; on the first page you have an article captioned "More illiterate scholars", and then on the fourth page you published the ungrammatical silly rambling of John Savard, Grad Student. Very subtle!

Yes, it is unfortunate that he takes up so much space. Humor not withstanding, it would be reprehensible to attribute Savards inability to develop a point logically to all graduate students at U of A .
