

World Vision will expand

The World Vision Christian Humanitarian organization plans to expand its national headquarters in Meadowvale West.

The charitable organization, which raises funds through donations to provide aid in 95 foreign countries, has received approval for the expansion from Mississauga's committee of adjustment.

Kenneth Dick, director of financial services for World Vision, says the decision is a positive sign for the organization. "It means we're being effective in our program and people are responding to our work."

The operation, at 6630 Turner Valley Road, opened in December, 1978 in its two-storey, 21,000 square-foot office and warehouse. Since then, the number of employees has increased from 75 to 110.

Dick says donations at peak periods pour in at the rate of 1,500-2,000 per day. World Vision films and edits its own television programs at its Mississauga offices to help raise funds. Its latest project is an attempt to raise $250,000 for emergency relief supplies in El Salvador.

The timing of the building expansion has not yet been decided. The committee of adjustment gave permission for the expansion although the construction will leave the company with six parking spaces less than required by the municipal bylaw.

50 years together

Mississauga is a long way from West Germany, but it seemed just like home to Mr. and Mrs. Heinrich Droge, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Droge, who live in Bremen, West Germany, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Saturday in Port Credit.

They were guests of their son, Karl Droge of Mississauga.

Mr. and Mrs. Droge have two children and five grandchildren, all living in Canada.
