With Iawin, Miss AGNES, (ed.) Worthy Women of our First Century, Phila., 1877, 8vo.

"This volume is a centennial torso. . . . Lives of thirteen worthy women from the old thirteen States, written by women belonging in each case to the same state as the subject of the biography—such was the scheme of the Women's Department of the Centennial Commission. . . . The result is five individual biographies and one collective, ('Women of New Hampshire.'). . . . The least substantial chapter in this book is the sketch of Rebecca Motte, of South Carolina; the best, as a literary performance, is Mrs. Sarah Butler Wister's notice of Deborah Logan. . . . This collection of biographies fully justifies the pains taken to gather it, and will long be read with interest and profit."—Nation, xxv. 290.
