

DOING AND BEING.

A young girl had been trying to do something very good, and had not succeeded very well. Her friend, hearing her complaint, said:

"God gives us many things to do, but don't you think he gives us something to be, just as well?"

"Oh, dear! tell me about being," said Marion, looking up. "I will think about being if you will help me."

Her friend answered:

"God says:

"Be kindly affectionate one to another."

"Be ye also patient."

"Be ye thankful."

"Be ye not conformed to this world."

"Be ye therefore perfect."

"Be courteous."

"Be not wise in your own conceit."

"Be not overcome of evil."

Marion listened, but made no reply. Twilight grew into darkness.

The tea bell sounded, bringing Marion to her feet. In the firelight Elizabeth could see that she was very serious.

"I'll have a better day to-morrow. I see that doing grows out of being."

"We cannot be what God loves, without doing what he commands. It is easier to do with a rush than to be patient, or unselfish, or humble, or just, or watchful."

"I think it is," returned Marion.

BE COURTEOUS BOYS.

"I treat him as well as he treats me," said Hal.

His mother had just reproached him because he did not attempt to amuse or entertain a boy friend who had gone home.

"I often go in there and he doesn't notice me," said Hal again.

"Do you enjoy that?"

"Oh! I don't mind; I don't stay long."

"I should call myself a very selfish person if friends come to see me and I should pay no attention to them."

"Well, that's different, you're grown up."

"Then, you really think that politeness and courtesy are not needed among boys?"

Hal, thus pressed, said he didn't exactly mean that; but his father, who had listened, now spoke: "A boy or a man who measures his treatment of others by their treatment of him, has no character of his own. He will never be kind or generous, or Christian. If he is ever to be a gentleman, he will be so in spite of the boorishness of others. If he is to be noble, no other boy's meanness will change his nature." And very earnestly the father added: Remember this, my boy. You lower your own self every time you are guilty of an unworthy action because some one else is. Be true to your best self, and no boy can drag you down."—Well-Spring.

DEATH.

Died at his residence, Pelee Island, Lake Erie, on the 1st day of November, Mr. Wm. McCormick, aged 70 years and 7 months. He was the fourth son of the late Wm. McCormick, Esq., and a very liberal supporter of the Church, and took an active part in the Battle of Pelee Island, against the rebels in the winter of 1866.

ETC., ETC., ETC.

We need not define to you what that means! Everybody knows that in detailing a collection of articles, for instance, the easiest way out of the difficulty is to particularize a few of the most prominent and end up with etcetra, etc.

Now that's just what we've got to do in this instance—we can tell you of Watches, altho' we cannot attempt to describe the variety of such—we can tell you of Diamonds (mounted in Earrings—Brooches—Collar Studs—Shirt Studs—Cuff Buttons—Locketts—Scarf Pins—Tie Rings—Finger Rings)—of an endless assortment of Silverware—of Bronzes—of Clocks—their name is legion—we can mention these, but after you have thought of every conceivable thing to be found in a first-class Jewelry Store, you have not touched the etcetra of our Stock. In this instance "seeing is believing."
