In the next place we have to express our regret that in alluding to the past history of the Mission, all notice of the kind and generous interposition of the Canada Baptist Missionary Society for the relief of the Mission when it required assistance and support as much as it ever has during the term of its existence has been entirely omitted. We presume the omission was unintentional but in giving any history of that Mission to our readers whether original or selected it would be unpardonable in us to omit all reference to an act which can never be spoken of but to take notice, that all arrenrages owing by them, in words of commendation. Differences we may have must be remitted to David Buchan, Esq., Toronto, had with the Canada Baptist Missionary Society on some points even where Grande Ligne was concerned to the credit of the Regular Baptist Union of Canada. but there never was, and never could be any opinion on this point except that their interposition in behalf of the mission was well timed and generous-worth of all praise and on account of which individuals should never suffer loss. With these remarks we commen the Grande Ligne Mission to the sympathics and prayers and support of our readers.

Grande Ligne Mission.

Through the Home Mission Record and other chanmonths. To meet immediate and pressing necessities a Provisional Committee was formed in this city in the month of November, 1848, and through its en leavors, and the labors of its general agent, the Rev. Leonard Tracy, a considerable amount of money wa paid me for the second volume of the "Evangelical raised for the mission, and the knowledge of its cha Pioneer," which you will please acknowledge in your racter and its usefulness spread widely among or churches. It was a noticeable fact, and a just occasion of gratitude and encouragement, that wherever he mission was advocated it immediately command onfidence, and at once took a lodgment in the hearts of God's people. Indeed, how could it be otherwise ever in any missionary operations has the guiding and of God's providence been more signally marklarger measures of the divine blessing. The appeal ing,—while indeed its system of operations had been liberal and comprehensive,—God had been leading the members of the mission by gradual but certain stages into nearer and still nearer harmony cast ridicule on a rite to which our Saviour himself street thousands of instances; and yet, men, bearing the down the solution of the form thousands of instances; and yet, men, bearing thousands of instances; and yet, men, bearing the down the solution of the form thousands of instances; and yet, men, bearing the solution. We are to be found jeering and scoffing the members of the mission by gradual but certain stages into nearer and still nearer harmony cast ridicule on a rite to which our Saviour himself loved Methodism." To our taste, there is far too loved Methodism." To our taste, there is far too loved Methodism." To our taste, there is far too loved Methodism." To our taste, there is far too loved Methodism." certain stages into nearer and still nearer harmony with distinctively Baptist views. As was very natural these Baptist proclivities had inclined the mission to a larger extent towards Baptist support, both from the circumstance of a falling off of Pædobaptist aid and by the force of natural affinities,—and Baptists responding to the appeal had become increasingly liberal towards it in their contributions for its support. Indeed, the time had come when it had fallen mainly on Baptists, and they must receive it as sent of God, and take the main care of it, or it must be straitened on Baptists, and they must receive it as sent of God, and take the main care of it, or it must be straitened on a rite to which our Saviour himself submitted, and which in its observance is so signally submitted, and which in its observance is so signally submitted, and which in its observance is so signally submitted, and which in its observance is so signally submitted, and which in its observance is so signally submitted, and which in its observance is so signally submitted, and which in its observance is so signally submitted, and which in its observance is so signally submitted, and which in its observance is so signally submitted, and which have been repeatedly adduced as submitted, and leader in the Wesleyan Times," is an example:—"We are Methodism." We, the undersigned, being members of the Wes-McNab. Mr. L. W. Smith was chosen Pro Vice Chancellor, and Mr. Crookshanks to the Caput. Mr. Macaulay we hear has declined the appointment.—
This will render it necessary to call another meeting of the Convocation. Mr. Smith we believe to be ineligible under the act, to the Pro Vice Chancellorship, not being a member of Senate. Mr. Crookshank we presume will not decline to act.
