MRS. SCOTT IN SELF DEFENCE.

Coroner's Jury's Verdict in Thorndale Shooting.

Witnesses Testify That Dead Man Was a Bad One.

Mrs. Scott's Plea Self Defence and

Thorndale, Sept. 17 .- The jury which, under Coroner Hughes, investigated the death of Harvey Scott, brought in the following verdict: "That Harvey Scott came to his death on September 13, 1909, by a shot from a revolver in the hands of Mrs. Wesley Scott, in justifiable selfdefence." It is almost certain from the evidence that the defence will be self-defence and temporary insanity. To the surprise of everyone Mrs. Wesiey Scott's evidence was not taken, and it will prob-ably not be heard until her trial on Oc-tober 4.

ably not be heard until her trial of ectober 4.

Wealey Scott, the husband of the accused, stated that he had owned the 32-calibre revolver used by his wife for tweive or thirteen years. It was usually kept in the bureau drawer, and was always loaded. He was certain he had seen it in the drawer on Sunday, and that it was loaded then. The witness occupied his little plot of ground on an agreement with his father, and received $130 a year wages. He had always taken his meals at his father's house, and left his wife to get her own.

agreement with his father, and received $130 a year wages. He had always taken his meals at his father's house, and left his wife to get her own.

Mr. E. Meredith suggested that they had been pretty scanty very often, and the witness replied that he did not know, as he was not there. She had been putting up with this sort of thing for at least eleven years. Harvey Scott was a strong and powerful man of very violent temper, and Wesley Scott had often seen him abuse his wife. The old man threatened very often to strike her, and heaped all kinds of abuse on her, and used the worst kind of language to her. She had complained that several times the old man had made improper proposals to her, and that she was afraid of him. Witness said his father had very often used violence towards him, and as recently as Sunday morning had thrown a heavy pail at him because he wanted to feed the horse some hay. Witness showed a big cut in his hand where the pail had struck him, and said that when he ran away Harvey Scott hurled a heavy walking stick after him. He never resisted the old man, but always ran away if it were possible, and if not bore it as best he could. The old man had repeatedly struck him with pitchforks, hoes and other implements.

with pitchforks, hoes and other implements.

Several times of late he had come to Wesley's place with a shotgun and shot at dogs and chickens. Mrs. Wesley Scott had been in a very delicate condition for some time, and appeared tired and worn out from ill-health. Harvey Scott would know that the witness' wife was alone in the house. Some time ago he had seen the old man strike Mrs. Wesley Scott, and she had him up in court once, and he was fined for using threatening language.

Mrs. Harvey Scott, wife of the deceased, while in the yard heard her husband and Mrs. Wesley Scott quarrelling. Harvey Scott had a loud voice, but at this time it was much louder than usual. She heard a shot later when in the barn, and

She heard a shot later when in the barn, and Mrs. Wesley Scott called her, but she paid no attention until she went away and put the calves in the field and came back. Mrs. Wesley Scott was in her own house, and said to the witness: "I did it. He is out of the road, and I'll be out of the road, too. You can all have your money now."

Upon being cross-examined witness ated that a dog was yelping loudly, it she could not see if it was being beaten.

Joseph Vining, a neighbor, who was first called after the shooting, said that Mrs. Scott seemed to be raving wildly when he went over, and was crying and very hysterical. She said: "If I'd got some of the money I'd have been far away from here," and added to Alfred Scott, who had come up: "But you've got the money, and now you see what's happened." She did not seem to be at all responsible for what she was saying. Witness had known Harvey Scott for many years, and knew him to be a very hard, cruel man to his family and of very violent temper. Mrs. Wesley Scott had always seemed a nice woman, and had tried hard to do the best she could.

Prince of Montenegro to Take Title of "Czar of the Serbs."

London, Sept. 17.—The Globe's Rome correspondent reports that Prince Nicholas of Montenegro proposes to constitute himself King on the occasion of his approaching jubilee. He wishes to take the title of "Czar of the Serbs." It is said that Austria will not raise any objection to this procedure, although such a designation would rylegate the Karageorgevitch dynasty to second place.

Chicago Building Collapsed.

Chicago, Sept. 17.— A three-storey brick building, nearing completion at North Sawyer and Milwaukee avenues, collapsed here to-day. Three workmen were killed, five are reported missing and fifteen were injured. Two bodies were recovered. Police and firemen made desperate efforts to clear away the wreckage.

Vessel Goes Down With 29 Persons en Board.

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 17.—Details have been received of the most serious marine disaster known in the Isle of Pines waters, which occurred on the night of Aug. 23, when the steamship Nicholas Castania, en route from Havana to Cienfuegos, went ashore on the south coast of the island between Carapatchibri and Calatadel Infierno (Hell'a Cove). Every living thing on board the ship perished.

The crew numbered 27 officers and sailors, and there were two passengers. The ship lies in bold relief on the high rocks jutting out into the Caribbean in mute testimony to her awful end. Eighteen human bodies have been found scattered over the plain bordering on the sea.

The missing eleven are believed to have become the victims of sharks. All the bodies recovered were so decom-posed that identification was impossible. It is believed the boilers of the vessel exploded when she went on the rocks.

THROWN INTO A PIT

Rhode Island Boy May Die as Result of Hazing.

Cranston, R. I., Sept. 17.—Hazing at the local high school is alleged to have been responsible for the injuries from which Maxwell Harrison, 14 years old, son of Rev. Z. Harrison, is believed to be dying at the Rhode Island Hospital. Three other boys are suffering from less serious injuries, due, it is said, to the same cause.

On Monday evening last Harrison and On Monday evening last Harrison and the other boys are alleged to have been thrown by older pupils into a pit. Harrison struck his leg against a sharp stone, causing a bad cut. Blood-poisoning set in, and, although the leg will be amputated, the hospital surgeons state that he probably cannot recover. Chief of Police Patrick Trainer announced to the think he expected to make several to-day that he expected to make severa intendent of the school states that al boys found to be implicated will be expelled from the high school.

THE FARM

MITES IN THE POULTRY HOUSE-HOW TO GET RID OF THEM.

HOW TO GET RID OF THEM.

(Mrs. W. L. McKenny in The Canadian Farm.)
Getting mites out of a henhouse isn't so much of a problem, but getting them out of a good-sized barn looks like a large undertaking. I have never had that problem to deal with, but have a pretty clear idea of what I should do to solve it. First I should get a bucket spray pump and spray the whole inside spray pump and spray the whole inside surface of the barn with a strong solu-tion of stock dip, going over it two three times at intervals of ten or fiftion of stock dip, going over it two or three times at intervals of ten or fiften minutes to get those that swarm out of the eracks after the first application. I should keep this up as long as I saw them crawling out, if I had to keep it up half a day. (Incidentally I might mention that I should have a man at the pump while I directed the spray.) Then have every bit of litter cicaued out and hauled clear away and the wagon thoroughly sprayed to kill those swarming over it. A few gallons of cheap coal oil would come in handy for quick and effective work, applied either with the spray or with a brush where the pests were worst. After that if the barn were tight enough to make it practical I think I would fumigate with sulphur. If this did not get all of them, I would repeat the dose in about I week.

with sulphur. If this did not get all of them, I would repeat the dose in about a week.

It means a lot of hard work, but it takee work and plenty of "dope" of one kind or another to get these pests out of a building of which they have taken possession. There are many lice killers on the market guaranteed to do the work, but it generally takes several applications of anything to make a thorough clean-up when mites get all over a building.

After they are well out of the walls of the hen house it is a good plun to whitewash the walls with whitewash in which plenty of salt has been dissolved. Mites will not find that a comfortable place to stay and tiere will be no mere trouble in that quarter for a y.a. or two. Then the few left can easily be trapped on the roosts. Have the roosts removable and take them out once a week and paint quickly with coal oil; then stand each roost up against a wire fence or something that will not burn, and set fire to it as soon as possible after painting, and the fire will run up the pole and burn off all the free oil, leaving the roost clean so as if any mites are left in the house they may again be method is that it leaves the house clean and sweet-smelling, whereas many of the patent louse killers make the build-ing reek with the odors of the various drug preparations, while this calls the pests out of the walls and floors instead of driving them to them.

Montreal, Sept. 17 .- The tragical death of a young man named Joseph Giroux, at St. Andre d'Argenteuil, Giroux, at St. Andre d'Argentouil, and the developments which followed are causing great excitement in all the surrounding district. Giroux was working with another youing man named Galarneau at a threshing machine. Suddenly he was pierced through the back by a bullet from a Winchester rifle, which had been hanging in the barn, and fell dead on the spot.

The first report was that in handling the straw with his pitchfork, Galarneau had caused the rifle to go off, with the above-mentioned fatal result. However, the Crown Prosecutor for the District of Terrebonne instructed Coroner Berthiaume to open an inquest. After the arrival of that officer, young Galarneau, who had been so

People of the locality connect the deed with a quarrel that took place between the two young men at a wedding some time ago, the dispute between them being on account of a young girl loved by both.

WOODSTOCK SUICIDE

Wm. Sutherland Was Sick and Depressed.

Woodstock, Sept. 17 .-- Wm. Sutherland, aged fifty-five, an employee of the Bain Wagon Company, committed suicide here some time to-day. Sutherland had been sick and unable to work for a month, and it is believed that this preyed on nis mind and that he took ais life while temporarily irresponsible for his actions. At 8 o'clock this morning Sutherland left his home, saying he was going for a walk. When he halled to return a search was instituted, but without avail. At 3 o'clock this elternicon as Mrs. Goodall was criving through a grove to the south of the city she found Sutherland lying on the ground dead in a pool of his own blood. She summoned Chief Thompson and Dr. Mearns, who found the instrument being a land had been sick and unable to work freely.

As all woodsmen know, the dietic standby of the wilderness dweller, whether he be a camper, tramper, or lumberman, is beans—ordinary dry white beans. Combined with these so as to make up a properly "balanced dietary" there should be a certain amount of the starchy goods—vegetables and fruits. Where these cannot be obtained pilot bread and other crackers which it is possible nowadays to get in large variety, are a partial substitute. Some of the nut foods now on the market are at once portable, palatable, and nourishing, but it must be understood that these are proteid foods to be used instead of meat, beans, or peas, and always in very moderate quantities. Lentifs (dried) are another proteid food which is easily carried and nutritious.

Salted, "corned," or otherwise preserved meats are of little value from any standpoint. The same preservatives which prevent these meats from undergoing chemical change outside the body will also preserve them from undergoing the normal chemical change which we call digestion inside the body. This, of course, applies equally to canned meats, which the dweller in the wilderness will, sooner or later, find to be a delusion and a snare.

Canned vegetables are of some slight food value, although here, also, the chemical preservatives interfere with the complete digestion of th. vegetables. Dried fruits and vegetables, which are now obtainable in large varieties, are usually free from adulteration, and are a valuable addition to the dietary of the dweller in the deep woods.

A meal of stewed lentils, "Boston chips," and soaked evaporated apricots, with a few good crackers and the unconscionable appetite of "all outdoors," would shock the head waiter at the best New York hotel. But it is a better meal dietetically than you would be likely to get from him; and just as palatable. For when a man is sojourning in the Widerness he is not usually a gourmet.—Dr. W. R. C. Latson, in the October Outing.

GOOD SHORT STORIES

John D. Rockefeller, jun., in one of the last addresses that he made to his Sunday school class before abandoning it, said of carefulness in business:

"Too many business men are careful on one side, their own side, only. Thus a coal dealer whom I used to know shouted one afternoon to an employee who was driving out of the yard:

"Hold on there, Jim! That coal can't have been weighed. It looks a trifle large for a ton to me.'

"Jim shouted back:
"This ain't a ton, boss. It's two tons."

tons."

"Oh. all right," said the dealer, in a mollified tone. Beg your pardon. Go ahead."—Washington Star.

She was reclining in a low chair in the drawing-room, thinking about her dear Willie, who had been legally her property for the space of three months, when a telegram arrived for her. Her maid at last restored her to consciousness. Her Willie run over!

Her maid at last restored her to consciousness. Her Willie run over! She could not grasp the full significance of it. One thing she would do—go to him at once: so she hastily attired herself, and at length reached her brother's office, who, having sent the news, would be able to tell her all about it. "How is he, and where have they taken him?"

Her brother stared at her stupidly. "Oh, don't keep me in suspense! Teil me where he is."

"Where who is!"

"Where who is!"
"Why. Willie."
"At his office. I presume. I haven't seen him to-day."
"Then what does this mean? Isn't he run over? Is this one of your silly jokes:"

George took the flimsy paper from his sister, read his own message, then exploded with laughter. It was a long time before he could convince her that this simple intimation that he would run over and pay her a visit was not a detestable and practical joke.—Tit Bits.

DEER SEEMED TO KNOW. Wild Doe Helps Wemen to Take Care of Wounded Fawn.

Wild Doe Helps Woman to Take Care of Wounded Fawn.

An incident in animal life which possibly may never be duplicated occurred a few weeks ago on the estate of George W. Watson at Eastern Point.

Soon after Mr. Watson arrived at his Eastern Point residence a fawn was born in the grass land around the residence. During the winter of course there was nothing to disturb the deer and they wandered at will around the estate. When it was time to cut the grass a mowing machine was put to work and the sharp knife of the mower found the little fawn while it was cuddled up in the herbage. One leg was cut quite badly—so badly that the baby deer was unable to get away. It was taken care of by Mr. Watson and the injured leg treated.

The little chap seemed to understand that it was in good hands and responded to the treatment. It was left where found, and each day the mother doe came along and attended to the provision of food, the youngster gaing health and strength daily. Now the little chap has fully recovered and is able to fight its own life battles. More ardent lovers of animal and bird life than Mr. and Mrs. Watson and they are well pleased to know that the fawn they cared for is able to follow its mother and enjoy the freedom of Groton woods.

It has been accorded to very few even those who spend much time in the wilds, to see baby deer nutrured as Mr. and Mrs. Watson saw their little pet.—From the New London Day.

SCRAP BOOK POETRY

How well I now remember
The day she left. Her word
At parting lingers yet within mine ear;
"Now down; fees to water
The flowers, fees the bird.
And keep the flat up to the mark; my dear."

And now I'm passing in review.
The things I did and did not do.

My shoes are in the parlor,
My shoes are in the hall.
And some are in the bathroom, too, I thin
My socks are on the mantel,
On the pictures on the wall,
And several neckties hang above the sink.

The sheets are at the laundry,

At least, I think they be;
There surely must remain yet one or two.
The towels—oh, the towels,
I used for the dishcloths. Gee!
I still see how they looked when I sot through

The agate ware and tin stuft
never could get clean
Whe bear could get clean
Whe broke some cups and platters,
They're piled behind the screen,
I'm hearing now the wailing she will make I guess the place is dusty.
This sometime since I called:
I'm living at the hotel down the street.
My wife comes home to-morrow,
And I feel somewhat appailed.
The sight shell ace will surely be a treat!
