A WORD WITH AMERICA.
How now—kindly kindred Nation!
Is it well to kindle thus Quite a prairie conflagration Terrible to both of us?
We are kinsmen, sons, and brothers, Let us be to kinship true; England's heart is just—your Mother's,
And she cannot fight with you!
If our rulers made a blunder, Frankly too they make amends, And the world is all a-wonder Why ye will not yet be friends;
'Twere ungenerous in brothers To insist on more than due,
When you know, as well as others
We will never fight with you!
What! as if forsooth we dare not!— By God's favour, England's coasts Are invincible!—we care not For a thousand thousand hosts:
But you only call we brothers All the tongues and people through,
And, though stout against all others,
Never will we fight with you!
Take your heritage—possess it; England gladly sees your growth;
And may peace and plenty bless it, East and west, and north and south:
Only, covet not another's; God brings wrongfulness to rue:
Though for us, we tell you, brothers,
Never will we fight with you!
Party-work, we understand it,
And how hard ambition strains With the morals of a bandit To secure its petty gains:
But amongst you, better brothers Mourne for what the baser do, While her anger England smothers, For she will not fight with you!
Surely to provoke the kindly Were a scandal and a sin;
And if selfish pacemen blindly Stir a storm that they may win, Spite of diplomatic bothers, Wrongs belike, and insults too,
You may make us sorry, brothers,
But we will not fight with you!
No!—the doom of both is written In a flood of blood and woes, If American and Briton Ever call each other foes:
By the name that names us brothers, Be there grace between us two,
By the love that lives in mothers,
Never will we fight with you!

MISCELLANEOUS.
If practice could make perfect, mankind should certainly know HOW TO EAT WISELY;
yet the following excellent advice from Dr.
Hall's (ever suggestive) Medical Journal, contains wisdom that will be new to most people:—
"1. Never sit down to the table with an anxious or disturbed mind; better, a hundredfold, intermit the meal, for there will then be that much more food in the world for hungrier stomachs than yours; and besides, eating under such circumstances can only, and will always, prolong and aggravate the condition of things.
"2. Never sit down to a meal after any intense mental effort, for physical and mental injury is inevitable, and no man has a right deliberately to injure body, mind or estate.
"3. Never go to a full table doing bodily exhaustion—designated by some as being worn out, tired to death, used up, done over, and the like. The wisest thing you can do under such circumstances, is to take a cracker and a cup of warm tea, either black or green and no more. In ten minutes you will feel a degree of refreshment and liveliness, which will be pleasantly surprising to you; not of the transient kind which a glass of liquor affords, but permanent; for the tea gives present stimulus and a little strength, and before it subsides, nutriment begins to be drawn from the sugar and cream, and bread, thus allowing the body gradually and by safe degrees, to regain its usual vigour. Then in a couple of hours you may take a full meal, provided it does not bring it later, than two-hours before sundown; if later, then take nothing for that day in addition to the cracker, and the next day you will feel a freshness and vigor not recently known. No reader will require to be advised a second time who will make a trial as above, while it is a fact of no unusual observation among intelligent physicians, that eating heartily, under bodily exhaustion, is not an unfrequent cause of alarming and painful illness, and sometimes of sudden death. These things being so, let every family make it a point to assemble around the family board with kindly feelings, with a cheerful humour and a courageous spirit; and let that member of it be sent from the table in disgrace, who presumes to mar the ought to be blest reunion by sullen silence, or impatient look, or angry tone, or complaining tongue. Eat in thankful gladness, or away with you to the kitchen, you graceless churl, you ungrateful, pestilent lout, that you are. There was grand and good philosophy in the old time custom of having a buffoon or music at the dinner-table."

CONFESSION OF PALMER.—At the ordinary meeting of the visiting justices of Stafford Gaol, on Thursday, the Rev. Mr.
Goodacre, the chaplain of the prison, presented a report respecting his interview with late convict William Palmer. The report is made up of extracts from the diary of the reverend gentleman. No order has been given respecting the publishing of it. We understand, that the chaplain found Palmer not unfrequently suffering intense mental agony. He was particularly so on Thursday morning previous to his execution.
The reverend gentleman gave him the best advice he could, showing the distinction between private sins and public crimes, and pointed out, that the latter demanded a confession before men. Palmer seemed to feel the force of the chaplain's remarks, and made use of the remarkable words:—"If it is necessary for my soul's sake to confess this murder, I ought also confess the others," adding, after a short pause, "I mean my wife and my brother." He then threw himself on the pallet in the cell and buried his face in the clothes. The chaplain proceeded to ask him, whether he was guilty of the murder of his wife? Palmer made no reply. The rev. gentleman then asked him whether he was guilty of the murder of his brother? A significant silence again betokened the prisoner's guilt; and when the chaplain could not forbear uttering the ejaculatory prayer—"The Lord have mercy on you!" he responded with a deep sigh.
He shortly afterwards somewhat rallied, and evidently calling to mind what he had said for he had neither denied or admitted his guilt. An application has been made to the chaplain for permission to publish the report of some of the extracts.
